PLANS DRAFTED FOR PERMANENT STATE-WIDE FIRE PREVENTION DRIVE

Dr. H. Roe Bartle of Kansas City Named Chairman — Campaign Outlined at Governor's Conference.

By BOYD F. CARROLL
Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 13.—Plans for a permanent statewide fire prevention campaign to improve fire prevention methods and remove fire hazards were adopted here yesterday afternoon, with organization of the Governor's Fire Prevention Conference for Missouri.

Approximately 300 representatives of municipalities, civic groups, insurance organizations and other interested groups attended the one-day meeting. It was called by Gov. Forrest Smith to set up a state conference similar to President Truman's National Conference on Fire Protection.

No officers were elected by the conference but executive and program committees previously appointed by Smith will carry on the campaign, the Governor said.

The Governor said he would appoint Dr. H. Roe Bartle of Kansas City, president of Missouri Valley College and now chairman of a conference committee, to enlist public support of the program, as general chairman.

No plan has been adopted for financing the educational program, but the Governor said this would be done. He indicated a considerable part of the expense of the campaign would be paid by insurance companies and related organizations.

Smith's appeal for "war on the tremendous loss of life and property by fire" was also the theme of nearly a dozen speakers. Action was urged to remove causes of fire, which last year caused more than 10,000 deaths and property damage of $711,000,000 in the United States.

Recommendations Listed.

Various Conference Committee recommendations for the state program, approved by the conference but not yet worked out in detail, include the following:

An intensive publicity campaign to enlist public support of better fire prevention methods. Enactment of adequate state laws and municipal ordinances to replace obsolete statutes and inadequate building and safety codes.

Legislation to enable rural districts to form fire protection districts and set up fire protection services.

Similar legislation to enable the smaller towns and villages to establish codes covering building construction and operation, and fire protection. A conference committee is drafting a suggested model ordinance for smaller cities and towns.

Recommendations on utilities on safety in installations, particularly on farms.

Educational programs on safety measures for rural homes.

Fire fighting training programs where fire fighting services exist, and improvement of training for existing services; advice to communities on fire apparatus and pre-fire planning by fire departments.

Fire prevention instruction in the schools and colleges, and conduct of special projects in communities such as fire prevention and clean-up weeks.

Steps to obtain the co-operation of newspapers, radio stations, civic groups, women's clubs, farm, fraternal and veterans' organizations and others, in continuing fire prevention measures, and establishment of speakers' bureaus in each of the 114 counties, to carry on the permanent campaign against fire.

State Fire Safety Division.

Gov. Smith said he would urge final passage of his bill to establish a State Division of Fire Safety, when the Legislature reconvenes for the fall session. This bill was passed by the House last June and is pending in the Senate Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence. The House will reconvene on Sept. 20 and the Senate on Oct. 11.

This bill was introduced after the disastrous St. Anthony Hospital fire in Effingham, Ill., last April, in which 75 lives were lost. The measure would set up a new state department with general powers over elimination of fire hazards, and fire safety control. It contains drastic provisions concerning fire safety measures in hospitals, schools and places of public assembly, and contains provisions for closing buildings where fire hazards exist.

Speakers in the meeting yesterday included Gov. Smith, Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick of Washington, D. C., chief of the United States Army Corps of Engineers; Lester E. Cox, business man of Springfield; Ray Lippard, St. Louis; Joseph F. Holland, St. Louis.

Faye Emerson to Seek Divorce; 'No Comment' Says Elliott Roosevelt

FAYE EMERSON
"I'm sorry to say..."
ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT
"A personal matter..."

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (AP)—Actress Faye Emerson plans to bring divorce proceedings against Elliott Roosevelt as soon as she finishes work on a motion picture now in production.

The 31-year-old actress, confirming late yesterday that she and the late President's second son have separated, said "Elliott and I parted on friendly terms."

As she stood by in a studio, a representative handed out an unsigned statement which said: "Faye Emerson confirmed today the report that she would seek a divorce from Elliott Roosevelt."

"Miss Emerson said 'I'm sorry to say that Mr. Roosevelt and I have been separated for some time and I plan a divorce when I have finished my current motion picture. Elliott and I parted on friendly terms.'"

Earlier yesterday she had declined to comment on reports of a rift. Roosevelt, who was reached by a reporter in Providence, R.I., said the breakup of the marriage "is a personal matter—I have no comment." He was in Providence for a speaking engagement.

His wife declined comment before the formal statement.

Roosevelt, 38, married twice before, and Miss Emerson, married once before, were wed in December 1944. They separated last month.

Roosevelt has remained at their Hyde Park (N.Y.) home in recent weeks and the wife has stayed at their New York City apartment. Neither Roosevelt nor his wife is reported to have a romantic interest elsewhere, and friends of the pair lay the rift to "a conflict in interests."

Mrs. Roosevelt was treated for a razor slash on a wrist last Dec. 26 at Hyde Park. Dutchess County District Attorney W. Vincent Grady, who questioned the husband and other persons, later declared the matter closed.

Roosevelt told reporters his wife cut herself accidentally, and that there had not been a family disagreement. Roosevelt said he finished his current motion picture, "Gaily, Gaily," in New York. She also has appeared in television shows.

The actress' first marriage was to William Crawford of California. Roosevelt previously was married to Elizabeth Donner of Philadelphia and Ruth Goggins of Fort Worth, Tex.

Miss Emerson appeared in 25 motion pictures before her marriage, and turned to the Broadway stage in 1948. She now is making the motion picture "Gaily, Gaily," in New York. She also has appeared in television shows.

The list of crew members included Navigator Lt. William Carpenter Jr., 24 years old, of Columbia, Mo.

SENATOR CHARGES LAW VIOLATION IN AID BRITAIN PLAN

Butler Attacks Provision to Allow Purchase of Canadian Wheat With U.S. Dollars.

Text of Program on Page 1-C.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (UP)—Senator Butler (Rep., Nebraska), today protested as a "100 per cent" violation of the law any plans to permit Britain to purchase Canadian wheat with Marshall plan dollars.

In a Senate speech, Butler specifically attacked that part of the British-Canadian-United States agreement which would allow dollar-short Britain to use Economic Co-operation Administration funds for purchases outside the United States.

Protesting that the decision violated a provision of the ECA law intended to encourage use of United States farm surpluses in the aid program, Butler sent telegrams to Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan and ECA chief Paul G. Hoffman.

"I suggest that if the administration persists in this attempt, the Comptroller General of the United States should be called upon to stop any expenditure for this purpose of funds appropriated for the Economic Co-operation Administration," Butler said.

This was the first formal Senate protest on the outcome of the tri-nation talks, which ended yesterday.

"It was fairly clear from the announcement and the news stories (about the conference) that it was decided to let the American farmer make the sacrifice," Butler said. "Assuming that the intent of Congress was clear in the ECA law, Butler said the conference decision was a 'flagrant attempt' to bypass the law."

The ECA law provides that "insofar as practicable," ECA shall authorize procurement of United States farm commodities which are in surplus.

Cripps' Views on Program.

The program agreed on by finance ministers of the three powers would, declared Sir Stafford Cripps, bring Britain's dollar crisis under control and pave the way for Britain's economic comeback.

Cripps, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, said the three-power decision "certainly" would halt further dangerous drains on Britain's gold and dollar reserves, and put the nation in a position to advance economically.

"The results of the conference are all part of our determination to deal with the cold war," he said. "This makes a very distinct and important contribution to strengthening the democracies."

In announcing their agreement, however, all three governments reaffirmed anew that their plan of action is based on the "assumption that extraordinary aid from the North American Continent would have to come to an end by the middle of 1952."

This put Britain and the other Western European governments on notice that the United States intends to end the multi-billion dollar Marshall plan on schedule, and that they must take immediate steps to become financially independent by then.

TRUMAN CALLS FOR WORLD TRADE AS WAY TO PEACE

Backs Multilateral Trading in Addressing Delegates to Monetary Fund and World Bank.

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (UP)—President Truman asked the World Bank and International Monetary Fund today to tear away obstacles to international trade in the interests of world peace.

Truman addressed representatives of the 48 member countries of the Bank and Fund as they gathered for their fourth annual conference.

The President admonished the delegates to work for co-operation "on a world basis for the benefit of all nations."

Calling for reciprocal trade on a multilateral basis, Truman said: "Nothing contributes more to the peace of the world than financial and development."

Truman also told his audience the United States "is vitally interested in the success of the United Nations."

"The President and Congress are doing everything they can to make the United Nations a going concern for the peace and welfare of the world."

Chairman Maurice Petsche, French Finance Minister, presented to Truman a gavel made from a tree at Bretton Woods, N.H., where international agreements to found the Bank and Fund were reached in 1944.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 12 (AP)—Communist dispatches said today Nationalist guerrillas now hold Tapti mountain areas along the Hupeh, Honan and Anhwei provincial borders.

The dispatches from Hefei, north Anhwei trouble spot, said the Nationalist guerrillas also included bandits. The Hefei North Anhwei Daily recently called on the Communists for "general mobilization" against bandits who gathered, harass communications and keep vast rural areas in turmoil.

Unless the Communists can quickly win the war within a year, the effect could be disastrous to them. Big as their armies are they can't afford to scatter them all over the conquered areas while the Nationalists continue to strengthen the democracies.

"The results of the conference are all part of our determination to deal with the cold war," he said. "This makes a very distinct and important contribution to strengthening the democracies."

In announcing their agreement, however, all three governments reaffirmed anew that their plan of action is based on the "assumption that extraordinary aid from the North American Continent would have to come to an end by the middle of 1952."

Navy Officer's General Charges Do Not Justify Hearing, Senator Says

Russell Warns of Inquiry if Johnson Lays Heavy Hand on Aviation Arm but Doesn't Expect Such Action.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP)—Senator Russell (Dem., Georgia), said today there may be Senate inquiry if Secretary of Defense Johnson lays a heavy hand on naval aviation. He added that he did not expect the defense chief to do such a thing, however.

Russell, a member of the Senate's Armed Services Committee, took the position that the Senate is not justified in holding hearings on the basis of the "general statements" made Saturday by Capt. John G. Crommelin, a veteran naval officer.

Crommelin contended the offensive power of the Navy is "being nibbled to death" at the Pentagon, the enormous office building which houses the Department of Defense. The naval officer said he hoped his statement would "blow the whole thing open and bring on another congressional investigation."

His statement was the latest flare-up in the Navy's long-smoldering fight against unification of the armed forces under the two-year-old law that put the Army, Navy and Air Force under a single defense establishment.

Crommelin to testify before the House Armed Services Committee soon after it resumes hearings on Navy-Air Force matters Oct. 5.

Senator Russell told a reporter that he would favor a Senate inquiry if Secretary Johnson should move to abolish Naval aviation or the Marine Corps. He said he did not think the secretary is going to abolish either of these Naval branches, but he added: "Of course, there may be something going on that I don't know about."

He said it took a lot of courage for Crommelin to speak out, and that he understands how Navy officers feel and is sympathetic with them.

When Crommelin first issued his statement, he said he realized he was risking his career. However, he told reporters yesterday that so far "nobody has said boo" to him.

Navy Not Planning Action.

Under Secretary Dan Kimball said today that so far as the Navy is concerned "no action is contemplated" against Crommelin for airing his views publicly. This seemed to leave open the question whether Secretary of Defense Johnson's office might take action.

Kimball said that Crommelin was speaking for himself "as he has every constitutional right to do."

The late Secretary of Defense, James V. Forrestal, was quoted yesterday by a naval aeronautical engineer as having said that "I fear for the striking power of the Navy after I leave office."

The engineer, Hugh Hanson, said at Los Angeles that he was prompted to recall the quotation by Crommelin's statement that the Navy's attacking power was being scuttled. Hanson formerly worked in Washington, where Forrestal was Secretary of the Navy before becoming the first Secretary of Defense.

Hanson testified earlier this month at a naval court of inquiry that Forrestal had told him that he (Forrestal) had persuaded President Truman not to fire Secretary of the Air Force Symington. Truman told a press conference last Thursday that the story was a fabrication.

NAVIGATOR BLAMED FOR 'NOT DOING JOB' IN AIRPLANE CRASH

Captain of Craft in Which 8 Died Off Ireland Testifies in New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (AP)—The pilot of a C-54 plane which crashed into the sea near Shannon, Ireland, with the loss of eight lives testified today that the navigator "was not doing his job" prior to the forced landing.

The testimony by Capt. Edward C. Bessey of Wethersfield, Conn., was given at a Civil Aeronautics Board hearing into the ditching of a trans-Ocean Airlines plane in Galway Bay, near Shannon last Aug. 15. The plane on a flight from Rome ran out of gasoline near Shannon, and 50 of its 58 occupants were saved by a trawler.

Bessey read a statement in which he said: "I can only say that I feel the navigator was not doing his job, particularly as he knew the radio sets were all inaccurate on that particular night due to atmospheric conditions. I also feel from past experience that he should have been able to take us to Shannon on celestial shots, that is, line of position shots."

Bessey was the first crewman to testify. The navigator, James Bauman of Great Barrington, Mass., will be a witness.

A statement from Capt. Alfred S. Brown, master of the trawler which picked up the plane's survivors, criticized the lack of lights or flares on the survivor's rafts.

Two alarms were sounded after the explosion toppled the warehouse against the residence and both structures caught fire. The warehouse, formerly a residence, was used by the A.A.S. Electric Supply Co., 6132 Bartmer, for storing sup-

Flames shot up from a broken gas pipe under the front part of the warehouse. Despite the rain, a large crowd gathered to watch the blaze.

Jona Bennett, 72 years old, who lives in the adjoining residence with his wife, was taken out of a front window by firemen because the toppled warehouse blocked the Arthur A. Smith, 1069 Roth avenue, University City, owner of the electric supply company and the residence, disputed the firemen's statement that there had been an explosion, saying no windows had been broken or timbers jarred loose. He attributed the fire to lightning.

Smith also took issue with Fire Chief Walter Kammann's estimate of damage to the warehouse. Although Kammann placed the damage at $4000 to the building and $5000 to the contents, Smith said the loss would be closer to $25,000, stating the value of stored supplies would be almost $15,000.

In a fire at his firm last April 10, firemen estimated the damage at $5000 but the actual loss was much greater, Smith said.

Two firemen were injured as a result of last night's fire. Raymond Hans, 5535 Delmar boulevard, suffered a puncture wound fighting the blaze. He returned to duty after treatment at St. Luke's Hospital.

Frank Paliser, 1473 Union boulevard, was thrown from the driver's seat when a hose truck, en route to the fire, skidded at Hodiamont and Bidre, avenues and struck a market at such premium prices as may be ruling in that market."

WORLD FUND SAYS DEVALUATION MAY BE ONLY WAY OUT

The fund's report dealt briefly with proposals for increasing the price of gold. While an increase would aid the gold-producing nations, it said, other effects might be less beneficial.

"A general increase in the price of gold cannot be a substitute for the measures in the sphere of exchange and payments policy which have to be taken if international balance is to be restored," it stated.

Commodity Prices.

The report declared that commodity prices in general are now too high in "deficit" countries.

"While the United States wholesale price index for manufactures was about 175 (1937 equals 100) in May 1949, the indices of export prices in dollars of the principal Western European countries exporting manufactured goods ranged around 210," the fund directors point out.

"The difficulty of exporting manufactures on an adequate scale to the United States is apparent from these figures."

Western Europe must make every effort to cut its prices, the report goes on.

"There may be some scope for price reduction by a lowering of profit margins, although these possibilities are necessarily limited," it says.

"The ultimate limit to price reduction is set by production costs. A reduction in costs through greater efficiency is at best a slow process, although the investment already undertaken and in prospect may offer hope in this direction."

"Many cost elements are notoriously rigid, and any general deflationary program for lowering costs and prices would encounter formidable resistance."

Discussion of Devaluation.

"Where a price reduction of the magnitude indicated above is necessary to expand exports, it would in many cases seem possible only through an adjustment in the exchange rate."

The fund's directors return to currency devaluation at another point in their report, too.

"A fixed exchange rate is desirable as long as a country is able to adjust its economy to changes in its real international position," they say. "But when the adjustments needed in face of a radical change in a country's international economic position cannot be made through home prices and costs, it may be necessary to change the exchange rate."

"Such a change should not be regarded as meaning the abandonment of the policy of exchange stability but rather the focusing of policy on a different party better suited to the new conditions."

Conditions for Devaluation.

"The fund agreement recognizes that changes in exchange rates can, and under appropriate conditions should, be an instrument of economic policy."

"It may be preferable for a country to change an unstable exchange rate through the machinery of fund consultation rather than to subject its economy to the risks of serious deflation and unemployment or to impose restrictions that keep imports so low as to endanger its well-being and efficiency."

The directors describe at some length what they consider the "appropriate conditions" are for currency devaluation.

"Countries with dollar payments difficulties are faced with the question whether an exchange rate adjustment can help solve their problem," the directors say.

"The immediate purpose of an exchange adjustment is to increase substantially the foreign exchange receipts and particularly the dollar receipts from exports."

"If this is to be achieved, the exchange rate adjustment must make possible a reduction in their dollar export prices and the demand for their products must be such that this reduction will make an adequate addition to sales."

"In some cases, it would also be important that the increased profitability of exporting would encourage a larger production of exportable commodities."

Need for Public Support.

"For exchange adjustment to be successful, it is essential that the expected benefits should not be dissipated by an offsetting rise in local prices and costs."

"It must, therefore, have public support and be accompanied by appropriate fiscal and credit policies."

"If the public recognizes that an expansion of exports is necessary to maintain the flow of imports, and is prepared to accept higher import prices without insisting on corresponding changes in incomes, exchange adjustments in the deficit countries should involve only a relatively small rise in the cost of living."

"If, however, the public is insistent on offsetting by higher incomes even a moderate rise in the cost of living, the result will be almost complete dissipation of the benefits of exchange adjustment."

"Even if an exchange adjustment is accomplished without a significant rise in prices and costs, it would be futile if the greater demand abroad were not matched by an equivalent supply of exports."

"Unless home demand is restrained, the expansion of exports, which alone can justify an exchange adjustment, will not be achieved."

The pound's value now is $4.03. Its devaluation, in foreign trade, would amount to lowering the price of British goods.

Many American officials have forecast privately that Britain must finally adopt that course, which so far it has shunned, but officially at least, the finance and foreign ministers of the United States, Britain and Canada did not raise the issue in the week-long talks.

ed its own inability to "provide the answer to all or even a major part of the world's financial ills" through its lending powers.

"It is beyond both the purpose and the power of the bank, for example, to cure the 'dollar shortage,'" said the report presented by Black, the bank's president.

The bank now has the resources to help finance "all the sound, productive projects in its member countries that will be ready for financing in the next few years, that can appropriately be financed through repayable foreign loans, and that cannot attract private capital," Black declared.

Black emphasized the part which the bank may play in building up the world's underdeveloped areas, as urged in the famed "Point Four" of President Truman's inaugural address.

But he said that foreign development financing "should preferably be derived mainly from private sources." And he criticized proposals for "fuzzy," long-term, low-interest loans which, he declared, actually are international subsidies or "a disguised grant to the borrower."

The bank thus far has made loans totaling $716,000,000 to 10 nations, Black reported. Twenty more reconstruction and development projects are under investigation.

Among the latter is a "loan of moderate size" to Yugoslavia. The report indicated that this would be a sum considerably smaller than the $500,000,000 which Yugoslavia requested in 1947 or the $250,000,000 more recently mentioned. The United States, through the Export-Import Bank, last week granted a $20,000,000 loan to Yugoslavia to help bolster Premier Josip (Tito) Broz's government in its own cold war with Moscow.

The report indicated that perhaps a majority of the pending loans are for development projects—many of them in Latin America—rather than for reconstruction in the war-ravaged areas. But Black noted that underdeveloped countries cannot absorb new capital quickly, adding:

"The principal limitation upon bank financing in the development field has not been lack of money but lack of well-prepared and well-planned projects ready for immediate execution."

The bank and the bank meeting will last through Friday. An estimated 250 top financial figures of the 48 member nations of the two institutions are here for the first time.

The Czech delegate, Pavel Flaher, seconded by Poland, objected to the fund's policy of closed-door meetings, but the members overruled him. Yugoslav delegate voted against the Czech proposal for open sessions.

"(B) That when and as soon as said agreement is made, the strike shall be terminated and the negotiations in an effort to dispose of all or as many of said 282 claims as possible shall proceed earnestly, expeditiously and in good faith."

Rejection by Unions.

After caucusing for an hour and a half, the union officers rejected the proposal, replying as follows:

"We have given careful consideration to Mr. Thompson's letter addressed to the citizens' committee and have decided that we are unable to agree with that portion of the letter beginning with 'provided, however,' and the remainder of such letter."

Eight union representatives, four railroad officers and six citizens attended the first meeting which began at 2:15 p.m. and ended shortly before 5.

Mayor Joseph M. Darst, who had been invited to serve on the committee, declined, saying his participation "would give the committee official status, which it does not have." The mayor said he did not want to do anything "which might hinder any steps that might be taken by federal authorities."

Hilpert, acting head of the citizens' group, is professor of constitutional law at Washington University. Other members are: Former Mayor Alton F. S. Johnson, Arthur G. Dreft, A. A. Ahner, John I. Rollings, and Oscar A. Ehrhardt.

Besides Thompson, the railroad was represented by Paul J. Neff, chief executive officer; Russell L. Dearmont, counsel for the trustees.

Strikers Hold Meeting.

While the company-union meeting was going on at the Jefferson Hotel, about 100 strikers met yesterday at United Hall, 2354 Lafayette avenue.

After the three-hour meeting, J. A. Rolfe, 4028 Humphrey street, St. Louis strike chairman, said the gathering was principally a business meeting. "The men got ready for a long siege," he said.

Officers explained to the strikers how to fill out detailed forms to qualify for unemployment compensation under the Railway Labor Retirement Act and under the strike benefit systems of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. The men said they would fill out the forms by Saturday.

Morale of the strikers remains high, Rolfe said. There was no discussion of possible settlement of the strike or discussion of the meeting in progress at the hotel, he reported.

The men are mainly interested in getting set to stay out as long as necessary, Rolfe asserted. He said he cautioned them against "mistakes" in strike activity. Apparently the word of caution was prompted by the "misunderstanding" that led to picketing of Cotton Belt trains Friday and Saturday.

There was a noticeable change in manner of the striking engineers, conductors, firemen and trainmen. Last Friday at their first meeting, strikers after the strike started at 3 p.m., many of the men appeared confused. Some had just come in from their final runs. Yesterday, after three mass meetings, the men appeared to have settled down to prosecuting their strike.

Use of Mo. Pac. Equipment.

Before the meeting, groups of strikers gathered on the sidewalk in front of the hall and discussed use of Missouri Pacific equipment by other railroads which they had noted themselves. However, Rolfe denied that any official reports of instances of bypassing the strike were received. In the sidewalk conversations, several men said they had seen Missouri Pacific freight cars being used to serve Monsanto Chemical Co.

"If Missouri Pacific equipment is being used, picketing committees will put a stop to it," Rolfe asserted.

The four railroads which had been hampered by activities of Missouri Pacific pickets reported today their operations were unhindered, except for one train. Illinois Central reported service has not yet been resumed on its daily freight run from East St. Louis to the Kraus quarry at Columbia, Ill., near Dupon. Resumption of that train, which uses some Missouri Pacific trackage, was being negotiated.

The Terminal Railroad Association, Cotton Belt and Frisco railroads reported normal operations today.

Grain Elevators Pinched.

Continental Grain Co. reported today operation of its elevators in St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha, Neb., had been crippled by the Missouri Pacific strike. Starting tomorrow, operation of the firm's Missouri Pacific elevator at 7500 Van Buren street will be on a half-day basis, Harold H. Vogel, manager of the St. Louis office, announced.

No deliveries of grain to or from the Van Buren elevator, which has a capacity of 4,500,000 bushels, have been made since the strike began. The elevator also is served by barges but no river shipments have been received. Part of the crew at a 600,000-bushel elevator at the foot of Chouteau avenue will be laid off tomorrow by the company, Vogel said.

The Kansas City elevator has a capacity of 5,000,000 bushels and the Omaha elevator 3,000,000 bushels.

Heads of several St. Louis industrial firms hampered as a result of the rail strike sent telegrams yesterday to President Truman urging him to intervene again in the strike, the Chamber of Commerce reported.

Appeal to Steelmen.

The Little Rock (Ark.) Chamber of Commerce sent a telegram to Presidential Assistant John R. Stettin in Washington, urging the Government to seek an early settlement of the railroad tie-up. Arkansas is served primarily by the Missouri Pacific.

Many industrial concerns in Arkansas were laying off employees, the Chamber of Commerce reported. A multi-million dollar highway construction program was bogged down because of lack of transportation and laying of a gas pipeline from Texas to a point near Malvern, Ark., was delayed. Officers of Arkansas-Louisiana Gas Co. said they were unable to finish the $8,000,000 project by Dec. 15 as planned. The line will carry natural gas into Little Rock, Hot Springs and Pine Bluff.

Businesses near the railroad shops in North Little Rock reported sales slumps of 25 to 75 per cent.

Railway Express Agency, Inc., reported that the strike has cut off from express service about 200 towns on the Missouri Pacific system. These are communities served only by the single railroad. Some packages sent by express shortly before the strike began have not been delivered. But 85 per cent of the packages, a spokesman said, were sent on by other railroads or by trucks. Since the freight embargo was placed in effect by the Missouri Pacific last week, no packages for that route have been accepted by Railway Express.

In Sedalia, Mo., about 1500 employees of the Missouri Pacific shops lined up yesterday for their final pay checks, then lined up again for unemployment benefits. The city's largest single source of income was cut off. Storekeepers said they reduced their buying materially as sales to railroad workers declined.

Near Kansas City, strikers maintained picket lines at the Chevrolet assembly plant. Kansas City Southern Railroad is operating switching engines for the plant without hindrance from the pickets. But J. J. Compton, chairman of the union strike committee, said: "The Missouri Pacific unions believe the Kansas City Southern has no switching rights at that property." Kansas City Southern officials replied that General Motors had asked the railroad to perform that service.

Despite the strike, one Missouri Pacific train was running in Kansas City. It was the engine and eight-car special that takes children on a quarter-mile ride in Swepe Park. Missouri Pacific employs service the train.

MOVE FOR TARIFF CUTS ASSAILED BY G.O.P. CRITICS

Malone Says British Came to U.S. to Seek Free Access to Markets and Achieved Aim.

Today in Congress

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP)—Republican critics of the reciprocal trade program balked today at a statement of Government policy, laid down in the British crisis talks, of seeking further cuts in United States tariffs.

The Senate is entering its second week of debate on the Administration bill to extend the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act until June 12, 1951. Under this act, the President can make tariff-cutting agreements with other nations who agree, in turn, to reduce their duties on United States goods.

Touching directly upon the issue was the announcement yesterday that the United States had reaffirmed its policy of trying to negotiate further trade agreements through which additional cuts in United States tariff rates could be made. It amounted to a hint that Britain might expect duties on some of its goods to be lowered.

Views of G.O.P. Critics.

Senator Malone (Rep., Nevada), an opponent of reciprocal trade, told reporters the British came to this country to seek free access to United States markets and "they got what they came after."

Republican Floor Leader Wherry of Nebraska said the tariff announcement indicated to him that some agreements already have been negotiated which the Administration doesn't want to tell Congress about.

He said "this flies right in the face of peril points."

Malone told the Senate today that the Administration's tariff policy will drive the American living standard down to a slave-labor level. He asked the Senate to vote against reciprocal trade, and approve instead his proposal for a flexible import fee in which duties would go up or down to balance production costs here and abroad.

"The present policy of our State Department," Malone said, "is a program of importing unemployment and driving down our living standards to the levels of the low-wage living standard and slave labor utilized by foreign producers."

The Democrat-Republican battle over reciprocal trade centers around a peril point amendment offered by Senator Millikin (Rep., Colorado).

The amendment would require the President to report to Congress whenever, in a trade agreement, he authorized a tariff below the rate which the Tariff Commission considers safe for American business.

A vote on the Millikin amendment may come Wednesday, but more likely Thursday. Administration leaders scheduled overtime night sessions, beginning tonight, in an effort to drive the bill through by the end of the week.

There is little doubt that the Senate will approve the two-year reciprocal trade extension, as the House has done, but the outcome of the peril point fight still was regarded as uncertain.

Millikin has said he has a fighting chance to win, while Democratic Leader Lucas of Illinois has flatly predicted an Administration victory.

Chairman Gillette (Dem.), Iowa, of a Senate agriculture subcommittee, said today the group will investigate the spread between the cost of farm products and the prices paid by the housewife.

Gillette said there is an "unconscionable spread" between the price the farmer gets and what stores charge for farm products. He noted he had recently paid 95 cents a dozen for eggs while the support price is only 35 cents a dozen.

Existing Farm Law Defended.

Senator Aiken (Rep., Vermont), said last night existing law provides for high price props for wheat and cotton and those who tell farmers otherwise are guilty of misrepresentation.

In the face of a new Administration drive to force a farm bill through Congress, Aiken defended the flexible support law he helped to write in the last Congress. It is due to become effective next Jan. 1.

He said he thinks that law requires 1950 support of wheat and cotton prices at from 83 to 90 per cent of parity.

He called this "a far cry from the misrepresentation of those who tell the wheat and cotton growers that they will get 60 per cent support under the 1948 act."

Parity is a calculated price designed to give farmers a return, in relation to things they buy, equal to that in some past period favorable to agriculture.

While Aiken said the possibility is growing that no new farm bill will be passed in this session of Congress, an Administration leader said every effort will be made to change the Republican-sponsored law.

Senator Magnuson (Dem.), Washington, today urged giving $25,000,000 to the Maritime Commission for immediate repair of 134 ships in the Maritime Reserve Fleet.

This, he said, would be the start of an annual program to get in shape some 439 wartime merchant vessels regarded by the joint chiefs of staff as a minimum for defense purposes. An immediate start on the reconditioning program also is essential for the nation's shipyards, he told a Senate appropriations subcommittee.

Magnuson said the commission estimates it will cost on the average $180,000 a vessel to pay for the actual needed repairs. Administrative and other expenses will add an estimated $6000 a vessel.

UNRUH NOTEBOOK MAY GIVE LIGHT ON MIND OF KILLER

Entries Tell of His Social Contacts With Other Men, Say Police.

CAMDEN, N.J., Sept. 13 (AP)—A notebook diary found in the room of Howard E. Unruh is being examined by New Jersey authorities seeking to shed further light on his killing of 13 persons.

Unruh, former artillery man, is being held for examination at the New Jersey State Hospital for the Insane in Trenton.

An operation will be performed there tomorrow to remove a bullet from his thigh. He was wounded just before his capture last Tuesday.

Detectives disclosed yesterday a new search of Unruh's bedroom uncovered a notebook filled with dated entries.

The exact contents were not disclosed but detectives said most of the entries told of Unruh's social contacts with other men—some designated by first names and others only referred to as "a man."

Meanwhile, Police Judge John R. DiMona ordered a psychiatric examination of an 18-year-old Camden boy, who telephoned police that he had "an urge to kill."

Judge DiMona said the youth—identified as Walter Zakrzewski—appeared "terribly upset over something" when he was interviewed by the jurist.

In reply to a question, Zakrzewski said his condition "had nothing to do with the Unruh case," Judge DiMona said. The youth was committed to the Camden county hospital, Lakewood, for 10 days' observation.

U.S. FILES $35,150 TAX LIEN AGAINST AUTO MAN TUCKER

CHICAGO, Sept. 13 (AP)—The United States Government filed a $35,150 income tax lien yesterday against Preston R. Tucker, promoter of the rear-engined automobile that never got started in mass production.

John P. Jarecki Jr., internal revenue collector, filed the lien in the county recorder's office. It is for 1947 income taxes for $33,005, plus interest, Jarecki said. A duplicate lien was filed in Ypsilanti, Mich., where Tucker has property, Jarecki said. He estimated the tax due was on an income of between $50,000 and $60,000.

Tucker and seven of his associates are under indictment on federal charges of mail fraud, violation of Securities and Exchange Commission regulations, and conspiracy.

SECOND MAN DIES AFTER MYSTERY SHOOTING IN CHINA

American Business Man Was Shot Twice —
Briton Was the Other Victim.

CANTON, China, Sept. 13 (AP) — Willard Freeman, 41-year-old American business man from Bridgewater, Mass., died today of wounds suffered in his suburban home last Thursday.

His was the second death in the mysterious shooting. Harold Harris, 45, a British trader, was killed instantly. Leonard Clark, 42, San Francisco explorer, was wounded in the chest but will recover.

The three fell victims of a .32-caliber pistol after a drinking party that ended in a fight. Chinese police today said they had "100 per cent proof" of who did the shooting. There has been no arrest.

Freeman's attractive widow, Maya, 33, said she slept through the fight and shooting in an adjoining room. She said high winds prevented her from hearing the gunfire after she retired.

Harris was shot three times, Freeman twice and Clark once near the heart. Neither Freeman nor Clark was aware that Harris died in the affray.

Police had not told Clark of Freeman's death today. The explorer was in a room some 15 feet away from Freeman's hospital room. Clark has said he found the world's tallest mountain in northwest China recently.

GAINS ENTRANCE TO HOME BY RUSE AND STEALS $50

A man representing himself as an employee of a downtown department store gained admittance to the home of Mrs. Jerome Lerner, 6223 Southwood avenue, and stole $50 from her purse yesterday.

Mrs. Lerner told police the man, about 40 years old, came to the front door shortly after some new furniture had been delivered. He said the store had sent him to make sure drawers in the dresser fit. Then he sent her into the bedroom he took the money from kitchen for a cake of soap and the purse and left.

HURT IN AUTO-TRAIN MISHAP

Joseph Kemp, 2508 South Tenth street, suffered abrasions of the head when an automobile in which he was riding was struck by a freight car being pushed by a locomotive yesterday at Seventh and Dorcas streets.

Driver of the automobile, Herbert Peeler, 1708 South Eighth street, told police he stopped at the crossing when he saw a flashing signal, but went on when he saw no train. His machine was struck by the first car of a five-car string being pushed by a Manufacturers' Railroad locomotive. Kemp was treated at City Hospital.

MILLION DOLLAR ATLANTIC CITY PIER DAMAGED BY FIRE

Damage to 300-Foot Section
Put at $200,000—Caretaker and Bride Rescued.

(Picture in Everyday Magazine.)

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Sept. 13 (AP)—A $200,000 fire swept 300 feet of the famed Million Dollar pier early today. The landmark, which juts 1900 feet into the ocean on the downtown section of the boardwalk, caught fire about 4:30 a.m. A northeast wind blew roaring flames down the beach away from boardwalk hotels.

The pier's huge ballroom, near the shore end, was destroyed. Fire Chief Rex Farley set the damage estimate at $200,000. The pleasure pier was closed on Labor day for the winter.

No one was injured. Walter Merchant and his bride of three weeks, Florence, were helped down a ladder to the beach by police from their living quarters about midway out the pier. Merchant is a bookkeeper for the firm that operates the pier.

Despite the early hour, thousands of curious townfolk turned out to watch the spectacle.

The Million Dollar pier is the second largest in Atlantic City, next to the steel pier. Built in 1906 by Capt. John L. Young, the pier once was a wonder for its size and construction. Through the years, it has remained a landmark of the resort.

A Limit to Church Service.

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 13 (UP)—When the Rev. Walter L. Cook announced the text of next Sunday's sermon would be "When Your House Is Vacant," a woman misunderstood him and applied for the apartment she thought the First Baptist Church had for rent.

HIGH COURT DENIES PLEA BY FALZONE

Former Senator Sought Writ to Compel Clerk to Accept
Notice of Appeal.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 13.—An application by former State Senator Joseph A. Falzone of St. Louis county for a writ of mandamus, to compel the clerk of the St. Louis Court of Appeals to accept and file his notice of appeal from a ruling of that court last May disbaring him from the practice of law, was denied yesterday by the Missouri Supreme court.

The court, in denying the writ, did not write an opinion. It was learned, however, that the denial was on the ground that Falzone had attempted to appeal the case instead of filing a motion asking the Court of Appeals to transfer the case to the Supreme Court for review. In disbarment procedure, under Supreme Court rules, an appeal from the Court of Appeals does not lie as a matter of right, it was said.

Falzone was disbarred in a proceeding filed against him in the court of appeals by the State Bar Advisory Committee. It was charged that Falzone, while a member of the State Senate in 1945 had solicited a $1500 bribe for passage of a bill regulating the practice of cosmetology, and that he had solicited about 65 St. Louis county tavern owners to retain him in defense of indictments charging them with violations of the liquor laws.

Flashes of Life

Truth in Advertising.
BARSTOW, Calif. — Radio Announcer Si Willing, putting in a commercial plug for a local shoe store, said footwear was selling "for peanuts"—3.98. Mrs. Nara Ervio showed up a short time later with 398 peanuts, went home with a pair of shoes. Manager Larry Sheer of KWTC said the ad was promptly changed.

Persistence Pays.
SOUTH GATE, Calif. — Mrs. Rose Boger's habit of telephoning every listed family named Mayne in whatever city she lived in or visited has paid off. Two weeks ago she and her husband, Ray, moved to nearby Huntington Park, taking a house on California avenue. She began calling Mayne families.
When she called Policeman William Mayne, who lives 10 blocks away on California avenue in adjoining South Gate—jackpot. He is her father, whom she hasn't seen for 25 years. Family circumstances separated them in Kansas City, Mo., in October 1914.

A big family reunion, with chicken dinner followed, at Mayne's home.

Jet Crash Landing.
DAYTON, O.—There's only one thing to do—Crash land, the Wright Field control tower told First Lt. Harold E. Collins after a tire of his jet fighter plane's landing gear blew on a takeoff.
"Okeeb," 24-year-old Collins, of Osborn, O., radioed back, "but tell those guys in the fire trucks not to squirt water on me unless it's necessary."
Only a few pilots ever have successfully crash-landed a jet, which normally is doing 150 miles an hour when it touches ground. Collins walked away from his landing uninjured—and dry.

WRITER OF 'SMILES' BURIED

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 13 (UP).—Lee S. Roberts, whose song, "Smiles," cheered thousands of soldiers during World War I, was buried yesterday in his native city. Roberts died Saturday night from a heart condition complicated by pneumonia. He was 64 years old. He was one of the first radio entertainers in the San Francisco bay area during the 1920s.

DEMURRER IN TRIAL OF EX-SALES TAX AID

Defense Says Henry Luaders
Was Not Negligent in Grocer's Audit.

A demurrer contending that Henry Luaders, Democratic committeeman of the Ninth ward and former auditor in the state sales tax office here, was not negligent in reporting sales tax audits to the state after the state rested its case against the former tax auditor, who is charged with negligence and misconduct in office.

Luaders went on trial yesterday before a jury in Judge Louis Connerford's court of criminal correction. Judge Connerford was expected to rule later in the day on the demurrer, filed by Morris A. Shenker, attorney for Luaders.

Bernard A. Rogers, an auditor for the State Department of Revenue, testified to discrepancies revealed by a reaudit of books of Louis Rombom, a grocer, of 1907 Franklin avenue, whose accounts were asserted to be correct by Luaders. Rogers said Rombom owed the state $999.52 in delinquent sales taxes for the months Jan. 1, 1946, and Sept. 30, 1947, a period in which Rombom's accounts had been reported as correct by Luaders.

Other witnesses from the Department of Revenue told the jury that in July 1947 Rombom reported $2278 in gross sales, whereas a reaudit showed gross sales of $4563. Rombom was indicted last October, charged with filing improper sales tax returns.

Cross-examination of state's witnesses by Shenker developed that some small merchants keep two sets of books, one for sales tax purposes, the other for income tax purposes, and that Rogers was not certain whether Rombom kept two sets of accounts. The demurrer asserted the state had failed to show that Luaders had been willfully negligent, or that the books audited by Luaders and Rogers were the same. The charge against Luaders is a misdemeanor and the prosecution is being conducted by Associate Prosecuting Attorney Jasper R. Vettori.

STEEL WORKERS GIVE UP PAY RISE FOR PENSION PLAN

man is "highly gratified" over the extension of the steel strike truce. Presidential Press Secretary Charles G. Ross told reporters: "The President is naturally highly gratified. He is very much pleased with the way things have developed up to now."

Maurice J. Tobin, secretary of labor, said the steel workers' acceptance of the proposals to settle its wage dispute would result in national prosperity "this country has rarely known."

"With every economic barometer indicating a decided upward tendency, the settlement of the dispute will make an added contribution towards a period of real prosperity for the whole economy," Tobin said.

"Strong pension plans contribute toward a sound economy since they continue purchasing power." In accepting the recommendations of the fact-finding board, the steel workers decided they would have to be satisfied with the average $1.65 an hour they now receive. The union had obtained three increases totaling 46 cents since the end of World War II.

Murray Defends Pay Rise Demand

Murray asserted the steelworkers demand for an additional 12½-cent hourly wage increase was "completely justified" but, said he would accept the board's recommendations in the public interest to end peacefully the union's dispute with the steel industry. He said the union was dropping the wage demand with "profound regret."

The board suggested the industry finance a six-cent an hour pension fund and a four-cent an hour insurance plan, but refused the union's demand for a general wage increase. The union had been asking for a wage-pension-insurance package program totaling more than 30 cents an hour.

In announcing the decisions of the union's wage-policy committee and the executive board after six and a half hours of sessions, Murray also accepted the President's proposal to extend the current 60-day truce.

Pattern for Other Groups.

Government officials hoped the union's acceptance of the board's report would set the pattern for labor peace in the automotive, coal and electrical manufacturing industries. Showdowns in these industries are expected within the next 30 days.

Some labor leaders expressed resentment against the board's report, but Government officials warned that the way to peaceful settlement of disputes may be rocky unless both labor and management are willing to make concessions.

William Green, president of the AFL, described the report as a "disappointment" to the workers of the nation. He said the cost of a "practical, workable plan" for the steel workers will be more than recommended by the board.

Alvanley Johnston, head of the independent Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said the steel settlement "is up to Phil Murray and his crowd. I have no idea how the rest of labor will react to foregoing the fourth-round wage boosts."

Delegates to the International union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers at Chicago condemned the report and called for a conference of all CIO unions to work for fourth-round wage increases.

In a resolution, the left-wing union called the findings of the board "miserable and inadequate." President John Clark of the smelter workers union ridiculed the steel board's proposal as "a puny, piddling pension and welfare program."

Grant Oakes, president of the left-wing CIO United Farm Equipment Workers' Union, said the steel workers accepted a settlement formula that is "inadequate." Labor sources said these reactions may presage a series of attacks on Murray by other left-wing unions prior to the CIO's national convention in Cleveland Oct. 31. The United Electrical Workers, biggest of the CIO's leftist organizations, will open its convention next Monday in Cleveland, and it is expected to join in the general criticism of Murray's policies.

Walter Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers, refused to comment on steel workers' negotiations, "while they are in progress."

Murray, weary and solemn after day-long conferences with the union high command, said he hoped the industry would accept the recommendations "in the same spirit as we do — and do it promptly."

The board recommended that before any bargaining takes place on pensions, there should be a complete investigation of the problems made jointly by the union and the industry.

An indication that the industry might balk at bearing the entire cost of the pension plan was seen by labor observers in Republic's statement of willingness to study the problem.

The company statement pointed out that "the principle that a man and his employer should jointly contribute toward the cost of social insurance and pension programs has been firmly established and accepted by the people of this country in the Federal Social Security Act."

Republic said it would "continue to urge this principle" in the pension studies with the union.

Inland Steel Co., which shut down steel-making operations at East Chicago, Ind., because of a union delay in answering the President's request for the truce extension, refused furnaces to resume full production.

Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., principal United States Steel subsidiary, also had banked furnaces in anticipation of a strike today of 1200 members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen against the Union railroad, a company-owned connection line. However, the B.R.T. last night postponed the walkout for two weeks at the request of the National Mediation Board.

The strike would have made 30,000 steel workers idle in four Pittsburgh district plants of Carnegie-Illinois and at many smaller plants which depend on the line for service.

Meantime coal industry sources said they expect the steel board's denial of a fourth-round wage increase to stiffen the resistance of mine operators to John L. Lewis's demands.

Contract talks between the miners and the Southern Coal Producers Association will be resumed tomorrow in Bluefield, W. Va. Lewis and the northern operators will get together Thursday in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. Lewis is asking for a shorter work day and higher wages for his United Mine Workers. He also wants increased contributions to the union welfare and retirement fund.

DARST PROPOSES SOME EARNINGS TAX EXEMPTIONS

Mayor Would Give Relief to the Lower-Paid, but Has Not Decided on Method.

Amendment of the city earnings tax law to provide exemptions for persons in the lower income brackets was advocated yesterday by Mayor Joseph M. Darst.

He said, however, he has not determined on just what basis such exemptions should be given, whether through a blanket exemption which would affect every wage earner employed in the city, or through specified exemptions for dependents.

"It is 'very unfair' that persons earning small salaries are not given exemptions of some sort," Darst said, adding that he believed such provision will have to be made "in order to get the State Legislature to go along with the city in the renewal of the state enabling act for the city earnings tax."

The present enabling act will expire July 18, 1950, unless extended. A bill to extend the city's authority to levy the tax of one-half of one per cent on the gross incomes of individuals and net incomes of corporations in the city has been introduced in the State Legislature. It would extend the tax until Dec. 31, 1952.

The Mayor said he did not plan to seek any increase in the amount of the tax levy, which it now is estimated will provide $8,000,000 revenue this fiscal year for the city.

Darst expressed the opinion that the earnings tax revenue would not be appreciably decreased through granting of exemptions because collections would continue to increase for a time as a result of more efficient operation of the law.

Comptroller Milton Carpenter declined to comment on the Mayor's proposal for exemptions except to say, "It's debatable."

HANGS BY FOOT, RESCUES GIRL, 5, WHO FELL IN WELL

CLEVELAND, Sept. 13 (AP)—A 61-year-old policeman, who hung by one foot, rescued a five-year-old girl last night after she fell into the muddy filth of an abandoned well.

The child, Gail Johnson, tumbled through an 18-inch hole in the stone cover of the well in suburban Bay Village. A "plug" in the hole apparently gave way beneath her weight.

Lt. William Serne, the policeman, was off duty and had been working in a yard nearby when he noticed the hole in the cover.

Peering down, he saw the muddy water churning violently seven feet below and then noticed a hand.

The officer maneuvered himself through the hole, hooked one foot around the cover and grasped a water pipe inside. After a few grabs he caught hold of the girl and somehow managed to drag her out.

Gail was covered with an inch of mud, but apparently suffered no injuries.

The well was abandoned many years ago and filled with earth. At one time, the policeman said, he believed it had been used as a septic tank. Rain water later drained in as the earth sank.

HAWAIIAN STRIKE NEGOTIATIONS END; NO SETTLEMENT

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (AP)—Peace talks in the Hawaiian dock strike have broken up in failure, and there is no sign today of early settlement. The United States Mediation and Conciliation Service, however, stood ready to try to help again if the chance arose.

Cyrus S. Ching, chief of the service, announcing last yesterday that "the parties remain so hopelessly far apart in their thinking that further mediation at this time would be of no avail."

Spokesmen for the seven struck stevedoring companies and the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union blamed each other for failure to settle the 106-day-old walkout during the five days of conferences here.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH NEW PRICE SUPPORT PLAN FOR HOGS THIS FALL, WINTER

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (UP)—The Agriculture Department today announced a new price support method Government will follow in supporting hog prices from now until next March 31.

Prices on fall and winter marketings of hogs will be maintained at levels intended to average out on a national basis to 80 per cent of the parity price for hogs. The department intends to maintain this level month by month during the marketing season. No specific prices will be announced for individual markets. In the past, the Government has announced individual support prices for various markets with week by week schedules of prices. The Government expects hog prices this Fall and Winter to drop at least to support levels as last spring's pig crop, which was 15 per cent larger than a year earlier, moves to market. The department has said prices probably will go down more than 18 per cent.

U.S. COMMISSIONER CONGRATULATES REICH PRESIDENT

Theodor Heuss Honored at Bonn Reception, Says Germany Will Overcome Difficulties.

BONN, Sept. 13 (UP)—Leaders of the new West German Republic and Allied diplomats met today at a reception honoring Theodor Heuss, the Republic's first president.

The Allied High Commissioners, John J. McCloy of the United States, Sir Brian Robertson of Britain, and Andre Francois-Poncet of France, extended congratulations to Heuss, who was elected by the electoral assembly on the second ballot yesterday.

Francois-Poncet, who was French Ambassador to Berlin during the Hitler rule, said in a speech that the Allies "are rejoicing that we are able to smooth the ways which led Germany to this great act" of establishing the new Republic. "We are certain," he said, "that you will fully justify this confidence by fulfilling the tasks which the basic law (constitution) bestows upon you."

Heuss, 65-year-old leader of the Free Democratic party and a political scientist whose books were barred by Hitler, said the profound belief of the German people in "the common ideals of Christian democracy and social responsibility" will overcome all difficulties.

He said it was the will of the German people to enter the great European community.

The reception at Bad Godesburg concert hall was preceded by a conference between McCloy and Socialist leader Kurt Schumacher, who finished second in the presidential balloting. They were reported to have discussed economic matters.

The reception was attended by most of the foreign consuls, the minister-presidents of the 11 West German states, top political leaders and Cardinal Joseph Frings of Cologne. With a glass of champagne in his hand, Communist Heinz Renner walked over to greet Cardinal Frings, shook his hand and talked to him for about five minutes.

Schumacher, one-armed, one-legged former Nazi concentration camp inmate, sat in the receiving line. Standing next to him was his greatest political rival, Konrad Adenauer, Christian Democratic leader, who will become West Germany's first Chancellor.

Adenauer already has played such a leading role in fashioning the new Republic that some of his most ardent supporters have muttered occasionally about a "one man show." From the time the Bonn convention began writing the Republic's constitution a year ago, he has been the most dominant figure in German politics.

He presided over the convention as chairman, actively directing its course. One of his major victories in the constitutional convention was the selection of Bonn as the capital. He will face another test soon on that issue in Parliament, with Frankfurt still bidding strongly with Socialist support.

When the August election gave Adenauer's party a plurality in Parliament, he worked out the coalition with the Free Democrats and the German party which gave him a scant majority.

Impressed by the force of the rightist coalition, a small band of West German Communists appealed last night to the Socialists to join them in a common front against "reactionaries." So far the Communist bid for an alliance has been ignored by the Socialists who are bitterly anti-Communist.

Heuss was a Democratic party member of the Reichstag and a professor in Berlin when the Nazis came to power in 1933. Soon he was thrown out of all his offices and forbidden to lecture.

The Nazis objected in particular to his book, "Study of Hitler." A prolific author of books and newspapers and magazine articles, he was forbidden to write any more, and all his books were barred and burned. His home was searched by Nazi police repeatedly.

Reds Attack Heuss.
Nevertheless, the Russian army newspaper Tagliche Rundschau in Berlin today declared that Heuss was once a Nazi sympathizer. It declared that "Heuss helped Hitler to power," and recalled that in 1933, Heuss as a deputy voted to give totalitarian powers to the Nazis.

Western sector papers in Berlin, on the other hand, generally welcomed his election.

After the war, Heuss became a professor at the Technical College at Stuttgart and Minister of Education of Wurttemberg-Baden state.

POLICEMAN HURT, SCOUT CAR AND TRACTOR-TRAILER COLLIDE

Patrolman Paul Craig, attached to the Hampton Avenue Police Station, was injured last night when a scout car in which he was riding collided with a 10-ton tractor-trailer at Mackinac avenue and Chippewa street.

Craig, who lives at 5400 Blow street, suffered injuries to the head and left knee. He was taken to St. Anthony Hospital.

The scout car, en route to the scene of an automobile accident at Goethe and January avenues, was driven by Patrolman Elliot Twitchel. James Sipes of Pittsburgh, who was driving the tractor-trailer, told police the brakes failed to hold when he applied them at the intersection. He was booked for careless driving, destruction of city property and failure to observe a major stop sign.

Grandmother, 'Public Energy No. 1,' Elected Yonkers Mayor on Recount

61-Year-Old Crusader Is Named Chief Executive of New York's Fifth Largest City.

YONKERS, N.Y., Sept. 13 (AP)—A crusading grandmother, who takes time out once a week to bake a batch of bread, is the new Mayor of this Hudson river city, fifth largest in New York State.

She is Mrs. Edith P. Welty, once christened Yonkers "public energy No. 1" because of her interest in civic affairs. She is 61 years old.

She became the city's first woman Mayor yesterday on the basis of a recount of proportional representation votes cast in the 1947 election. The recount was ordered after Mayor Curtiss Frank resigned effective Sept. 1 to enter private business.

The city council candidate with the highest number of votes is declared Mayor. And Mrs. Welty—with 20,587—clinched the job as 1947 runner-up.

A new Mayor will be elected in November and take office Jan. 1.

Why should I pay higher telephone rates?

For the same reason your customers pay more for your good food, Mrs. Roberts

"It costs you more to give your customers what they want. To make a profit, you have to charge more."

MRS. R: That's true. But you've picked up a lot more customers. You ought to be making plenty of money.

"Suppose you had a lot more customers, Mrs. Roberts. You'd have to enlarge your dining room and kitchen, buy more china, more tables and chairs, more silver, more kitchen equipment."

MRS. R: That would cost plenty—at today's prices!

"So, even if you doubled your business, wouldn't you still have to raise your prices?"

MRS. R: Yes, I guess I would.

"That's our situation, too, Mrs. Roberts. Our month-to-month operating expenses have gone up much faster than our revenues."

"On top of that, we've had to enlarge our telephone plant at postwar costs to take care of our new customers demanding service."

"That's why our earnings are at a lower rate today than in the depths of the depression."

"To give Missouri good, progressive telephone service, we must get our earnings back to a normal level. And to do that we need higher rates—now!"

BATH IN BATH MORE LUXURY THAN NECESSITY TILL IT RAINS

BATH, England, Sept. 13 (AP)—The city council has asked the people of Bath to give up bathing until it rains.

R. J. Russell, the city's deputy water engineer, said the drought around here is serious. "A bath in Bath right now," he declared, "is more a luxury than a necessity." If Bathites must bathe, he added, one bath a week in not more than five inches of water ought to be enough.

THREE HOLD UP STORE, TWO CAUGHT LATER

One Robber Fires Bullet
Which Passes Near Head of Child Asleep Upstairs.

Three young Negroes held up a confectionery at 5122 North Broadway last night, one of them firing a .45-caliber bullet which passed a foot from a 4-year-old child asleep in an apartment above. Two of the robbers were captured a few minutes later by detectives who spotted them in their flashy yellow convertible on Pine street near Compton avenue, nearly four miles away.

In the holdup, $115 was taken from Randy Kindred, confectionery proprietor. The child nearly hit by the bullet was Carol, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith.

Men arrested gave their names as Charles Harper, 19, living in the 3300 block of Lucas avenue, and Robert Garrison, 18, 2800 block of Lucas. Police quoted Harper as admitting he entered the store with the third Negro, and said Garrison admitted waiting outside in the automobile. The third man, who is being sought, fled from the machine as the detectives approached.

Kindred told police Harper and the third robber ordered meat, then drew weapons. While Harper, armed with a knife, took $50 from a cash register, the other man, who had the pistol, took Kindred's billfold containing $35. This robber then fired the pistol, apparently trying to frighten Kindred.

About this time Kindred's wife entered from the rear, but was forced back by Harper who threatened her with the knife. The man with the pistol then hit Kindred on the head, inflicting a scalp wound. As the robbers fled several customers, about to enter the store, saw what was going on and provided police with descriptions of the robbers and automobile.

Arrests were by Detective Sgt. Leslie V. Woodward, head of the liquor squad; Detective Cpl. Philip T. Dwyer and Detective Henry R. Peoples.

TRAIN GOES IN CREEK, 3 OF CREW MISSING

Frisco Engine, 7 Freight Cars
Pile Up in Washout at Seventy Six, Mo.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SEVENTY-SIX, Mo., Sept. 13.—Three members of the crew of a south-bound Frisco Lines freight train were missing today after the engine and seven cars of the train rolled over on their side in a swollen creek, which had washed out part of the track north of here. Seventy-six is 94 miles south of St. Louis.

The missing were reported to be Quinton G. Briggs, engineer; John E. Faulkner, fireman, and William N. Nunn, brakeman. All are from Chaffee, Mo.

The accident occurred about 11:35 o'clock last night. The train was bound from St. Louis to Memphis.

Conductor Luther King, who escaped injury, said the train was proceeding slowly because of the heavy rain. As the engine was about to cross a small bridge, he said, it went over on its right side. Seven cars immediately following piled up off the rails in back of it. He told officials of the railroad that the bridge apparently had been weakened by the swollen waters of the creek, which under normal conditions is little more than a ditch.

Two overnight passenger trains of the Frisco, one from St. Louis to Memphis and the other from Memphis to St. Louis, proceeded along the washed out tracks as far as the wreck. Passengers were then moved by automobile and bus from one train to the other to continue their journeys.

The washout may be repaired by tonight, an official of the company said.

SPECIAL HEARING DENIED ON POINT IN RACE PHONES CASE

Supreme Court to Hear
Arguments Friday —
State Seeks Writ
Against Nangle.

By BOYD F. CARROLL
Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 13.—A motion by Attorney General J. E. Taylor for appointment of a special commissioner to take testimony on one phase of a pending case involving jurisdiction of Circuit Judge James F. Nangle of St. Louis to order restoration of telephone service to the Pioneer News Service of St. Louis was denied by the Missouri Supreme Court yesterday afternoon.

The Supreme Court overruled the motion without issuing an opinion. The denial, it was said, was on the ground the pending case is an application by the Attorney General for a writ of prohibition, involving only points of law and jurisdiction, and that taking of testimony on a question of fact was not necessary.

Taylor asked for the writ of prohibition after Judge Nangle last April ordered Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. to restore to Pioneer 19 telephones disconnected in February 1947. The service was cut off on orders of then Gov. Phil M. Donnelly and Attorney General Taylor on the ground the service was being used to violate the law in distribution of racing news to bookmakers.

Two full years elapsed before Pioneer made a successful effort to recover its telephones. After the election of Gov. Forrest Smith, Pioneer News Service applied for an injunction in circuit court, and Judge Nangle ordered the telephone company to restore full service to the racing news agency. The point of evidence involved in the request for appointment of a special commissioner, was whether the telephone company had specifically followed instructions of state officials in disconnecting all of Pioneer's phone lines. Taylor said the order required all service to be cut off. Counsel for Pioneer has contended the order applied only to Pioneer's private lines to customers, and not to all of its telephone service.

The writ of prohibition case involving the Attorney General's contention Judge Nangle had no jurisdiction to order the telephone service restored is set for argument before the Supreme Court on banc on Friday.

GIRL SWIMMER BACK IN U.S., PLANS TO TRY CHANNEL AGAIN IN '50

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (AP)—Shirley May France said today she would try again next summer to swim the English channel—and "I'm going to make it."

The 17-year-old Somerset (Mass.) high school girl, who was pulled from the channel exhausted just short of her goal a week ago, arrived at LaGuardia Field from London shortly after midnight. Commenting on her unsuccessful swim, she said "the tides didn't bother me. It was the coldness of the water."

"Next time, I'm going to start earlier," she told reporters. "If I had gone to England earlier this summer, I would have had my choice of some beautiful days on which to swim the channel."

She said she would start training shortly after Christmas for next year's attempt. The girl was accompanied on the plane by her father, J. Walter France, and her coach, Harry Boudakian.

Ted Wornor, her manager, who was among those waiting at the airport, said arrangements already had been made for another channel attempt next year.

BALTIMORE POLICE STUDY ST. LOUIS SYSTEM'S METHODS

Operations of the St. Louis Police Department were being studied today by two police officers from Baltimore, Md., who plan to use St. Louis as a model in modernizing the Baltimore department.

The two visitors, Capt. William Taylor, in charge of records and communications, and Thomas Miller, director of personnel, said the reputation of the St. Louis department as the most efficiently operated in the country was known far and wide. The reputation has gained, they said, since last year's reorganization.

The study of St. Louis operational methods was suggested to Baltimore by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the visitors said. They will be joined here Thursday by the Baltimore Police Commissioner and Chief of Police, who are attending the Chiefs of Police convention at Dallas, Tex.

New Orleans Mayor Says Costello Plans Gambling Coups in 3 Cities

Morrison Asserts New York Racketeer Is Trying to 'Muscle In' on Politics in New Orleans, Los Angeles, Chicago.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 13 (UP)—Mayor Delesseps S. Morrison, speaking as head of the American Municipal Association, today urged that the Federal Government investigate Frankie Costello and reported that he plans to "move in" on the governments of several large United States cities.

He said his association, representing 9500 cities and towns, has discussed the situation thoroughly. Its members have agreed to keep each other informed about attempts by the Costello syndicate to gain political power and influence in large-city governments.

The mayor referred to reports that Costello is attempting to "muscle in" on political affairs in New Orleans, Los Angeles and Chicago. Emphasizing that he was speaking as president of the municipal association, he urged "immediate and energetic action" by federal law enforcement agencies to "aid cities faced with this situation." He also said a "thorough probe of Costello's activities is in order."

National and International. "It is national and international in scope," Morrison said of the syndicate Costello reputedly directs from New York. "It is a matter of record that operations of the syndicate include gambling houses, slot machines and allied activities in six or eight states from coast to coast and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico. "There is a great deal more which is suspected but cannot at this time be proved. Recently, Costello was quoted locally as saying he would put up half the funds to defeat our administration in New Orleans if the (Gov. Earl) Long-old regulars would raise the other half."

He said it looked as if the syndicate had picked Los Angeles to begin its campaign.

Urges Action. He urged "concerted action on four fronts:"

1. Close liaison and co-operation among officials of cities.
2. Exposure by the press and news magazines of the ramifications of the syndicate's "unholy alliance with rackets and legitimate business."

3. Action by the Federal Government.
4. "An awareness by citizens of Los Angeles Mayor Says Costello Is Brains Behind Cohen.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 13 (UP)—Mayor Fletcher Bowron charged yesterday that the New York racket boss, Frankie Costello, was the brains behind Mickey Cohen, gambling boss at Los Angeles. The Mayor made his accusation after conferring with heads of police departments and municipal executives of other cities at a meeting in Chicago. The Mayor said he believes Costello's aim is to establish big time, organized gambling in Los Angeles. The Mayor predicted the United States was on the verge of a sweep of gangsterism such as prevailed in the early '20s.

Homers Great Things, but Much Depends on When They're Hit; Dodgers Realize Good Results

Problems of Building Ball Club in a Hurry.

A new-time baseball man was talking about the difficulty of building a good ball club, even with unlimited funds available. It has been tried many times by wealthy men who acquired franchises as a hobby and figured that expenditure of large sums of money would accomplish anything you wanted.

Tom Yawkey spent many millions before he finally hit the world series jackpot with his Red Sox in 1918. He didn't win with the big name stars he obtained in his first plunge for a championship. The most recent owners of the Boston Braves spent lavishly, too. They finally won a pennant last year, but in winning and after they won, they didn't have much of a ball club. P. K. Wright opened the cash box—if it ever was closed—but the Cubs have had and are having their troubles. Bob Carpenter, with apparently no bottom in the cash box, has his Phillies in third place. His operations have been more business-like than those of many others as virtually from the beginning he sought to build with the best available young talent, regardless of cost. The Pittsburgh Pirates have done very well at the gate under the ownership, but their success has been financial rather than artistic.

"Don't quote me, and I'll tell you some of the problems," the baseball man offered. We agreed to keep him what our good friend Biggie calls "unanimous."

There's a Reason When Able Player Is for Sale.

WHEN you build in a hurry by buying, you purchase too many of the other fellows' headaches," our veteran of the diamond began. "Suppose you buy from a club with a good farm system. The parent club has two outfielders, say, who are hitting about the same in the minors. One is a regular for promotion to the organization's top club. You buy the other fellow, with a just-as-good average. He makes a good start for you, but it develops that he likes the bright lights. You scouted him on the ball field. The club that had him knew about his off-the-field tendencies. By July or August you know that you bought a player who won't help you win. Or perhaps he's a clubhouse lawyer. He's an agitator. Or he just hasn't got it in the clutch. Perhaps he's a pre-day ball player. He doesn't want to play when a tough pitcher's on the hill. He values his batting average more than he values an extra victory for your club."

Come to think of it, the Cardinals have sold several headaches through the years. There was one pitcher with a very good average. He rubbed the players the wrong way. He was an irritant. One day he moved an outfielder to right-center for a hit that the outfielder usually played left-center. The outfielder made a valiant effort to catch a line drive to left-center but missed. When the good outfielder reached the bench the pitcher suggested that if the outfielder had been playing that hitter right, it would have been an easy out. There was no murder that day, but the outfielder admitted he had a strong urge. Another outfielder, missing a ricocheting ball hit to the corner, was asked by the pitcher if he was playing on roller skates. The consensus strengthened that the pitcher was not a good influence. He was traded. Another player was traded because he regarded his average as more important than the club's percentage.

It isn't just an accident that the Cardinals, through the years, have had a fine team spirit, with everybody for everybody else. No cliques, no blocs. About the nearest thing to a bad situation was a pitcher who resented the attention the world paid to Dizzy Dean and a jealousy that made one good hitter on the club suspect that another good hitter had broken his favorite bats. And of course you're bound to have that now and then, as long as they use human beings to play baseball.

Fall River Catcher Signs Bonus Contract With Boston Braves

BOSTON, Sept. 13 (AP)—Joe Andrews, husky 17-year-old Fall River athlete sought by many professional organizations and colleges, late yesterday was signed to a bonus contract by the Boston Braves.

The Braves, who divulged no figures in the deal, assigned Andrews to their Owensboro, Ky., farm in the class D Kitty League. He will report next spring.

A catcher in his school days at Fall River's B.M.C. Durfee High, Andrews will work out at first base for the rest of the season at Braves Field.

By Bob Broeg

Individually several members of the league-leading Cardinals will have goals to achieve other than the collective ambition for a championship when they begin an important 12-game home stand tonight against the New York Giants, who also have more than a curious interest in fourth place.

Tied for fourth with Boston at the moment, the Giants have a chance for a thin slice of the world series money, the big cut of which is the prize that has brought a hot battle between the Redbirds and Brooklyn.

The Cards' first-place advantage, with 17 games to play, still is a length and one-half because both contenders were idle yesterday. The Redbirds arrived home in the morning from Cincinnati while the Dodgers spent the day traveling to the Rhineland, where they will open their last western trip tonight.

In the 8:30 opener of the showdown stay at Sportsman's Park, where Eddie Dyer's athletes have played 661 baseball this season by winning 43 of 65 games, big George (13-6) Munger will seek his fourth straight victory over New York. For the Dodgers, Dyer's Giants, who have won only seven of 20 contests from the Cardinals, the starting pitcher probably will be Dave (9-11) Koso, a trouble-prone left-hander who beat Brooklyn in his last try.

The pennant fight alone promises to bring out crowds to enable the Redbirds to shatter their home record quickly. Right now they're only a little more than 70,000 behind the Cardinals, paid admissions of 1947. And there will be side attractions in the individual games to which several Cardinals aspire.

For instance, Enos Slaughter and even Stan Musial still have a chance at the National League championship. Jackie Robinson, the brilliant Brooklyn second baseman, leads with .347, but even though batting averages don't fluctuate much late in the season, Slaughter might make the grade.

The Cardinals' captain, hitting .339, was sidelined during the second game of last Sunday's double-header with the Cubs. He is expected back in the lineup tonight.

Other Goals for Stan.

Musial, batting .331, still is 16 points behind, in view of the Man's recent savage slugging. One would count him out, because of that heavy and consistent hitting. Stan has his eye on getting 200 hits for the fourth time in his career. He needs 21 in the last 17 games and if he could keep pumping home runs in the sensational fashion that has brought him four in the last three starts and 12 in the most recent 22 contests, he even might equal his 39 circuit swipes.

Red Schoendienst, Musial's roommate and the best-fielding second baseman in the league, has snapped out of a slump in time to make a bid for his first 300 season at bat. The five-season Rover Boy of the infield is just a point off now.

An additional Redbird goal is a 20-game season and perhaps the most victories of his major league career for Howard Pollet, the comeback left-hander. Pollet, who gained a game win May 14, now has achieved 19 triumphs. And he seems certain to have from three to five chances, depending on the way the race goes, to equal or break his personal high.

He won 21 in the championship season of 1946.

The four players mentioned—Slaughter, Musial, Schoendienst and Pollet—rank in that order in the Post-Dispatch's contest to select the most valuable member of each St. Louis major league club. Actually, though, 33-year-old Capt. Slaughter is pulling away in the vote of fans using the official ballot printed daily sports page of the Post-Dispatch.

Why He Likes Slaughter.

A Troy (Mo.) fan Charles Linahan, summarized the feeling among the Slaughter boosters when he accompanied his ballot with a note, reading:

"Stan the Man is one—and one of the greatest—but Old Aches and Pains is the one that has kept him on top. As a team man he is tops for all time."

In the most recent standing in the most valuable player contest, Slaughter led the Cardinals with 2332 votes. Musial was second with 1953, Schoendienst third with 1715 and Pollet fourth with 226.

In order then came Chuck Diering 125, Ted Wilks 94, Marty Marion 88, Nippy Jones 72, Joe Garagiola 64, Eddie Kazak 57, Tommy Glavinio 54, Al Erezle 36, George Munger 14, Ron Northey 13, Del Rice 13, Rocky Nelson 4, Lou Klein 4, Harry Brecheen 3, Solly Memus 3, Fred Martin 1, Gerald Staley 1 and Ken Johnson 1.

As before, Bob Dillingham continued to top the Browns with 635 votes and was followed by Roy

By Carl Lundquist

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (UP)—

Here's a little off-day prose on behalf of a couple of great pros, Enos (Country) Slaughter of the Cardinals and Joe Page of the Yankees, as candidates for the most valuable player awards this season.

It's a downright clinch the Cardinals wouldn't be in first place without that "country club" which Enos has wielded for a 339 average, tops for the team and second highest in the league.

And it is just as sure that the Yankees, who have never given up their league lead since the opening day of the season, wouldn't be sitting up there so securely without the masterful pitching of Page, considered by many competent observers to be the greatest relief hurler of modern times.

An Old Gas-Houser.

Slaughter, as terrific a competitor as any guy you ever laced up a pair of spiked shoes, is enjoying his best big league season in his ninth year in a Cardinal uniform.

Now a veteran of 33, he was one of those Cardinal oldsters who were supposed to be slowing up, but he is batting at a late season pace which may enable him to wrest the National League batting championship from Jackie Robinson of Brooklyn. He now trails Robinson by only eight points.

There will be considerable support for Stan Musial, Slaughter's teammate, who could become the only four-time winner of the award in history by taking it again this year. Stan the Man, has played spectacularly through the stretch weeks of the season and at 331 is only eight points behind Slaughter. Moreover, he has 32 homers, an item that can't be laughed off.

British Champion Eliminated by Mrs. Page in U. S. Women's Amateur

Rain Puts A Halt to Program

ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 13 (UP)—Mrs. Julius A. Page Jr., of Greensboro, N.C., the 1937 titleholder, eliminated British champion Frances Stephens today just before a beating rain caused a suspension of play in the forty-ninth Women's National Amateur golf tournament.

Mrs. Page tumbled Miss Stephens from the lists in the second round play, 4 and 3, in the face of a day-long downpour.

The score was barely posted when the siren wailed over the Merion Golf Club East Course, suspending the play because of rain. At the time, most of the greens were flooded.

The North Carolina veteran, runner-up for the title the year following her victory, defeated the slender British girl on the back nine holes. They were even at the turn, but then Miss Stephens, who never Englished and never missed a green with her approach shots in yesterday's first round, shot three successive above-par holes.

Mrs. Page shot par on the No. 10 while Miss Stephens bogeyed. The American bogeyed the eleventh, but won the hole when the English girl double-bogeyed. Mrs. Page then birdied the twelfth to take a three-hole lead as Miss Stephens bogeyed again.

They halved the thirteenth in par 3s. The fourteenth went to Mrs. Page, despite a bogey, for again the English girl bogeyed. She cope with the elements and went two over. When they halved the fifteenth, the major foreign threat to the American title was ended. Suspension of play came with only nine of the scheduled 31 matches completed. In the other pairing, Mrs. Charles R. Harbaugh, Cleveland, O., defeated Marjorie Lindley, Decatur, Ill. The Ohio woman complained of feeling slightly ill and decided against facing the heavy rain.

There was no indication play might be resumed. A night-long rain was followed by a heavy drizzle which became steadily worse. The weather brought out a variety of costumes as players after pair tied off in everything from dinkies to slickers to slacks, and from Nor'easters to berets to babushkas.

The suspension left a number of interesting matches on the course. Mrs. Joanne Barr Tracy of Dallas, Tex., Scottish-born but an American citizen, who eliminated defending champion Grace Lenczyk in the first round, was one up on Marjorie Burns of Greensboro, N.C., at the end of 13 holes.

Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta, Ga., twice a runner-up for the title, was one down to Ryima Struel of Mt. Clemens, Mich., at the end of 13.

One minor surprise marked the morning round when Mrs. Sophie G. Untermyer of White Plains, N.Y., eliminated Mary Agnes Wall of Menominee, Mich., 3 and 2. Veteran Maureen Orcutt, current Eastern champion and runner-up for the National title in 1938, defeated Mrs. William Hamilton of Abington, Pa., 5 and 4. Germain Porter, Manoa, Pa., former Western champion, defeated Mrs. Charles Leighner, Baldwin, N.Y., 8 and 7.

Little Mrs. Tracy, playing in her first national championship tourney, ousted Miss Lenczyk, the defending titleholder, 1 up, yesterday.

Mataya Has 769 Series
On Dayton (O.) Alleys
A change of scenery has not hurt Frank Mataya one bit as far as his bowling is concerned. Now preparing himself for a new job as a bowling instructor, the St. Louisan has been going "great guns" in Dayton, O.

Recently he totaled 702 with a 278 game and then came back in another three-game series with 279, which included 10-frame counts of 268 and 279.

Mataya is still one of those old-fashioned bowlers who use a two-fingered ball.

Outstanding Card Prospect Bats Like Another Musial
ALBANY, Ga., Sept. 13 (AP)—Russell Rac, a 19-year-old from Galveston, Texas, is champion of the Georgia-Florida Baseball League's champion Albany Cardinals.

Centerfielder Rac won just about every possible rookie honor open to him and now tagged as one of the brightest stars in the St. Louis Cardinal chain.

The six-foot, 190-pound youngster hit 16 home runs, third highest in the Class D Georgia-Florida League, in 134 runs, second highest, and tied for the league lead in total bases with 267. His batting average was .316.

Such batting as that won for Rac the title of "most outstanding rookie" in the league. He also was selected on the All-Star team and on the North-South team later in the season. He was voted the "most outstanding" player on the Albany team by players.

Besides his batting power Rac was a fine outfielder and has a good throwing arm.

He Once 'Got Behind' Strangler Lewis

WRESTLER RAY STEELE's death due to a heart attack last Sunday will come as a surprise to the wrestling world. On the mat, all good athletes die old. But Steele was only 50. Just a youth compared to septuagenarians like Stan Zbyszko, George Hackenschmidt and other antiquies who on occasion still can put on a good show.

Steele, although a development of the showmanship type of "rassling," got his early training the hard way. Always in top condition, he Steele could handle angles and could have held his own with top men in days when an ambitious mat athlete, hampered by a broken arm, leg or even a neck. That happened as a matter of fact on more than one occasion.

Steele, like old John Pesek, was a streak of lightning at his best. Lloyd Carter brought him to St. Louis in the early twenties and finally worked him into preliminaries in the promotions of Jimmy Londos and Tom Packs. Before long Ray was engaging in professional roles. And when the Jack Curley and Jimmy Londos factions began fussing over title rights, Steele was sent east to "take" Lewis and get him out of "Champion" Londos's way.

Steele Suspended For Foul Play.

It all failed in the end as Steele was concerned. Referee Ed Forbes disqualified Ray for striking Lewis with closed fists, elbowing and committing other fouls under the New York rules. The Strangler was unable to catch up with Steele to apply his favorite chancery (headlock) holds until later. After about 20 minutes of developed blisters on his feet—both men were shoeless by agreement—and Big Ed caught him.

It was then that Steele began using his fists and after 28 minutes and three official warnings.

St. Louis U. to Play in Garden Game on Jan. 10

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (UP)—A total of 46 teams from out of town, including 10 major conference and tourney champions headed by Kentucky and San Francisco, will invade Madison Square Garden this winter to battle local colleges on the basketball floor. The Garden schedule released today shows 26 doubleheaders and two single games starting Dec. 1 and ending March 7. After that will come the National Invitation tournament, N.C.A.A. tourney and the East-West All-Star game. St. Louis University will make one appearance in the Garden during the regular season, playing Long Island U., Jan. 10 in the second half of a doubleheader. City College and West Virginia play in the opener.

The Kentucky Wildcats, champions of the Southeastern Conference and winners of the N.C.A.A. championship, will be back with almost an entirely new lineup. Ralph Beard, Alex Groza and other stars of the '48-'49 team have passed into the pro ranks. The Wildcats will be here Dec. 15 to meet St. John's, co-champions of New York City.

The San Francisco Dons, who gained a tremendous New York following as a result of their triumph in the National Invitational last March, will play two games: Dec. 22 vs. St. John's and Dec. 26 vs. Long Island University. Incidentally, this is the first year since 1927 that out-of-town teams will appear in more than one game.

The University of California will also appear in two games, against New York U., Dec. 20, and City College, Dec. 22. In addition to San Francisco and California, five other Pacific Coast teams will invade the Garden—Oregon State, Washington State, U.C.L.A., Southern California, and Santa Clara.

The tournament and conference champions invading are Kentucky, San Francisco, Oklahoma Aggies of the Missouri Valley Conference, the former Marshall State, Kansas State of the Big Seven, Western Kentucky of the Ohio Valley, Yale of the Eastern League, North Carolina State of the Southern Conference, Hamline of the Minnesota Conference, Oregon State of the Pacific Coast, and U.C.L.A. of the Southern Division of the Pacific Coast.

Basket Training Program.
A basketball training program for boys from 14 to 17 years of age and 10 to 13 will begin at the Boys' Club, 818 Lafayette avenue, Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock. Organized teams in the age groups are invited to attend.

THE Cardinals are at Sportsman's Park for their final stand. They've dug in at the home dugout.

"And those Cardinals look first-class in first place," cornered Mr. Chinwell.

Ron Northey has had a tough summer of it with the Redbirds. But you'd hardly say Northey has lost his punch.

D. C. Wilcutt, former Billiken, has signed for another try with the Bombers. It looks like Wilcutt will cut some figure this time.

Puddle Jumper won at Hawthorne and taking a hunch from quite weather quite a few of the boys went with him.

Bombers Sign Two New Basket Players
The management of the St. Louis Bombers, after announcing the signing of D. C. Wilcutt yesterday, today released the names of two more players who have affixed their signatures to contracts for play with the Bombers during the 1949-50 season. The two latest players to sign are Andy Tonkovich and Mike McCarron.

Tonkovich was with the Providence Steamrollers during the early stages of the 1948-49 season. A leg injury forced his retirement from the game. Tonkovich, however, underwent surgery on the injured leg after leaving the Steamrollers and the former Marshall College star has assured Coach Grady Lewis that his injury has completely healed. Tonkovich, 6 feet 2 inches tall, weighs 185 pounds.

By Robert Morrison.
A field numbering 158 and lacking only in the proportion of Walker Cup stars it attracted was announced today for the forty-seventh Western Amateur golf championship in which Robert H. (Ske) Riegel will defend his title starting next Monday at Bellefonte Country Club.

Riegel, registering from Tulsa, Okla., 1946 champion Frank Stranahan and last year's runner-up in the Western, Jimmy McHale of Philadelphia, are the three Walker Cup representatives in the field for which entries closed last night.

Missing are the national amateur champion Charles Coe of Oklahoma City, who was not expected to risk his year's laurels in this secondary amateur title meet; Willie Turnesa, Ray Billows, Chuck Kocis, Bruce McCormick, Ted Bishop and John Daynes, all members of this year's triumphant team in the American-British series.

97 Out-of-Town Players.
But the quality of the field remained high with such performers included as Dick Chapman, present Canadian amateur champion; 1949 national amateur semifinalist, Billy Campbell of Huntington, W. Va.; quarterfinalist in the same tournament, Harold Padock of Aurora, O., and young MacGregor Hunter from Los Angeles, Calif.

"There are almost 100 (97 to be exact) out-of-town players in the field," observed local chairman Hord W. Hardin, "and most of these you can be sure are pretty good players. Otherwise they would not take the time and expense to play in the tournament."

Besides Riegel and Stranahan, past champions include the veteran Chick Evans of Chicago, under whose name the Western Golf Association conduct its scholarship program. Evans, who hasn't missed competing in a Western Amateur since he first won in 1909 at 17 years of age, has won eight of the events. He last won in 1923.

Another former champion entered is John Lehman of Chicago, who won at Chicago in 1930. Last year's medalist, Lawrence Glosser of Oklahoma City, also is in the field as well as other "name" amateurs like Harold Brick, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Walter Ciscio, Louisville, Ky.; Howard W. Creel, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Walter Emery, Tulsa, Okla.; Jim Frisina, Taylorville, Ill.; Francis Winninger, Stillwater, Okla., and Harold Foreman, Highland Park, Ill.

The St. Louis area group is headed by Missouri Amateur title holder Jack Geiss; Jimmy Jackson, district champion Ken Heilmann and Joe Siwtzer.

Proximity Will Face Nine Foes In $25,000 Trot

WESTBURY, N.Y., Sept. 13 (AP)—Ten horses will compete Thursday night in the fourth annual $25,000 invitational American trotting championship race at Roosevelt Raceway.

Proximity, the queen trotter of modern day performers and runner-up for the 1948 diadem and winner of the championship in track record time of 2:02 2-5 in 1947, looms favorite because of her long string of victories.

The others are Rodney, 1948 harness horse of the year and unbeatable this season on a mile track; Charley Dean, Demon Hanover, Dutch Harbor, Vita Lee, Chris Spencer, Chestertown, David Spencer and Buster Volo. Proximity has won 18 of 19 starts this season, losing only the Roosevelt's two-mile trot by a length to Demon Hanover. She will be driven by Clint Hodgins for owners Ralph and Gordon Verhurst of Victor, N.Y. Rodney worked the kinks out last week after a long trip from the Middle West by truck and while he disappointed under the Roosevelt lights, he is expected to show an improved performance. Demon Hanover, 1948 Hambletonian champion owned by Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Hoyt and driven by Hoyt, might well be the winner. The four-year-old son of Dean Hanover was clocked in 2:02, while finishing second to Proximity in a 2:01 4-5 mile two weeks ago. Chestertown showed marked improvement in his last start, clocked in 2:04, while finishing second in a 2:03 3-5 mile. The darkhorse of the race will be Chris Spencer, which finished third in the two-mile trot. He will be driven by Harry Whitney.

Has Chance for Record. READING, Pa., Sept. 13 (AP)—Florican, two-year-old trotter of the Arden Homestead Stables, stands a good chance of setting a new money winning mark for horses of his age and gait. Florican captured his third straight Grand Circuit stake yesterday by winning the $11,141 Reading Futurity. The victory, worth $5421, raised Florican's total to about $45,000—only $4000 short of the all-time record for two-year-old trotters. Stuart Hanover finished second and Honor Bright third as Florican won in straight heats of 2:13 and 2:08 4-5. The three-heat 13-class pace was won by W. H. Cane's Mighty Meddum in consecutive dashes. Myera and Sheppard's Burma Hanover grabbed the three-heat 18-class trot in straight heats.

Scott Blackstone Wins. WESTBURY, N.Y., Sept. 13 (AP)—Scott Blackstone won the featured Jericho mile pace last night at Roosevelt Raceway, flashing across the finish line a length ahead of the favored Miss Castle. Dewey Abbe placed third. Driven by Bob Walker, Scott Blackstone notched his fifth victory of the season and now shows a record of 11 times in the money out of 21 starts. The veteran eight-year-old paid $27, $10.60 and $8.10. The time was 2:06.

Gonzales Advances to Quarter-Final Round in Pacific Coast Tourney

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 13 (UP)—Top-seeded Richard (Pancho) Gonzales yesterday advanced to the quarter-finals of the twenty-third Pacific Southwest tennis championships, by defeating Arnold Saul, formerly of USC, in a hard-fought victory. Gonzales won 9-7, 9-7, but the bespectacled Saul, who makes a business of upsetting top-seeded netters, had him set point once in each set. Feliceimo Ampon, Philippines champion, defeated George Richards, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4. Ampon dropped the first set while getting used to Richards's left-hand play. Herb Flam of UCLA eliminated Italian champion Giovanni Cuculli, 7-5, 6-3, and Frank Parker defeated Willis Anderson, a former national municipal court champ, 6-1, 6-1. Art Larsen of San Francisco downed Gilbert Shea, 6-4, 6-4.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

To Outlaw Genocide

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I appreciate deeply your editorials on the United Nations convention for the prevention and punishment of the crime of genocide. Your favorable attitude towards the problem of outlawing internationally the mass destruction of national, religious and racial groups antedates even the action of the United Nations of Dec. 11, 1948.

This most humanitarian of all treaties is now before the United States Senate as well as before many other parliaments of the world. Quibbling about legal points will not stop the triumphant march of human conscience which has been alerted by people of good will including yourself.

The new direction of our civilization is boldly outlined by this treaty. Tyrannical governments have no right to kill off their citizens as a farmer would feed at liberty to kill his chickens. Nations, races and religious groups have their legitimate place in history and modern society. They produce great spiritual and material values which enrich our world culture.

The destruction of religious groups impoverishes the religious life of the world. Religion is neither national nor domestic. It transcends state boundaries and therefore the destruction of religious groups should be clearly understood as a matter of international concern.

To those who would say that the genocide convention is inconsistent with American tradition or interests I pose the following questions:

1. Do you know that four great Americans fought for the same principle? They are Presidents Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, and Franklin Roosevelt, who fought against massacres in Tsarist Russia and in Romania, who tried to save the Armenians, and who fought the Nazi return of genocide, respectively?

2. Why should you be indifferent to the fate of the Baltic peoples who brought up the charge of genocide in the United Nations?

3. Do you know that the United States is on the receiving end of the evil of genocide because it is called upon to spend millions for rehabilitation of survivors of genocide?

4. Would you like to spend a night in a city where murder is not prohibited? Why do you agree to lawlessness in the world community? Why did you attack the Nuremberg judgment as an ex post facto law and now refuse to co-operate in the enactment of a law which would prevent ex post facto situations in the future?

5. Why don't you read carefully the genocide convention especially Article 5, which makes this treaty non-self-executing and dependent upon implementing domestic legislation, which would have to be enacted according to the constitution of every nation? Through Article 5 the constitutional peculiarities of every nation are safeguarded. Further safeguards, if necessary, can be introduced by reservation, which are an accepted custom in American as well as in foreign law. The genocide convention is in full accord with the moral principle of the American people and its great Constitution.

One feels that the majority of the American people see the problem in the correct light and are ready to act according to their conscience.

An Upright Judge

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Thousands in this vicinity who knew Justice Wiley B. Rutledge when he was in our midst will mourn his passing at early age of 55. His 20 fruitful years at Washington University Law School will be long remembered. He was, in the words of Shakespeare, "An upright, a learned judge."

Not Captive, Entertained

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

You write about so-called "Helpless Audiences." Did it ever occur to you that you may be a bit opinionated, and that riders of public transportation do not feel the same as you do about radios on the vehicles?

I, for one, am grateful for the opportunity to listen to the radio while I ride, and I know many of my friends feel the same way. At no time do we consider ourselves "captive." We are being entertained and we like it.

MRS. VINCENT W. HOEFLINGER.

Nerve-Shattering Annoyance

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I shun all buses and streetcars that have radio broadcasts, as I think it is a nerve-shattering annoyance, and think it should be legally banned. Thanks for your stand.

An Elderly Woman's View

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Your editorial "Helpless Audiences" expresses my thoughts precisely and I thank you most sincerely for taking your stand against this nuisance.

I am an old lady and do not ride the buses or streetcars very often, but when I do, this terrible racket makes me very nervous and I feel that I am being imposed upon. My son rides on a streetcar to work every day and he said the noise is so terrific that he can't even read his paper and he certainly hopes the Post-Dispatch will be successful in the endeavor to have this nuisance put an end to.

A Shoe Shine Racket

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The shoe shine boys have a nice little racket in St. Louis near the Greyhound bus station. They charged two of our Denver boys $1.25 for a shine. We sat there quietly but got only part of our money back.

Maybe you could do something about this, if you know about it.

Those 10 Points

No one expected the three-power talks at Washington to solve Britain's financial plight; the causes of that plight are too deep-seated to be resolved overnight. But the 10-point program, if it is fulfilled, should ease the drain on Britain's dwindling gold and dollar reserves. Sir Stafford Cripps, who is not wont to engage in dramatic exaggeration, is convinced it will stop any further dangerous encroachment on those reserves.

No rabbits were pulled out of the hat by the conferees. No nostrums were proposed. No magic snake oil was peddled. Instead, for the most part, the conferees dealt with things that are capable of accomplishment without undue hardship or unfairness to any of the countries involved. In the matter of example of stockpiling rubber and tin by the United States and Canada, who would not feel more secure if ample supplies of these two vital materials were stored away for emergency use? Or begrudge Britain the dollars such a transaction would bring?

In asking for an adjustment of customs procedure on this side of the water, the British were only appealing for fair treatment. It is well known that customs rules have unfairly and often stupidly discriminated against British products. An AP dispatch yesterday told how a shipment of china which arrived packed in sets had to be unpacked, sorted into individual groups on which duty was assessed, and then reassembled. Goods on which low tariffs apply have been reclassified in higher brackets. And so on.

The limitations on the use of Marshall plan dollars by Britain may have seemed equitable when they were imposed, but in the light of experience it appears the Marshall plan would work better in the long run if Britain were freer to make certain purchases elsewhere than the United States in order not to increase its dollar indebtedness. Whatever temporary disadvantage may accrue to certain American producers should be offset by the use of Marshall plan dollars in the best way to promote European recovery—which is, of course, the whole objective of the Marshall plan.

The proposal to review the debts Britain owes to other countries refers, for instance, to the situation between Britain and India. Britain is now supplying India with huge amounts of goods, and India is paying for them by asking Britain to reduce the blocked sterling credits that it built up during the war. This is wholesome to the extent that it reduces Britain's debt, but in the present crisis it depletes British production and consumes goods that otherwise might be exchangeable for dollars.

It was agreed at Washington that attempts should be made to stimulate American investments abroad. Ordinarily, a creditor nation automatically makes such investments. But it is highly doubtful, in the present unsettled state of the world, and in view of currency and other difficulties, if American capital is ready to venture forth. However, it was for the very purpose of making development loans which private banks wouldn't care to assume that the World Bank was created. It could play in the future a more useful role than it has in the past.

Whether one likes it or not, the United States, as the world's richest nation, must assume the responsibilities of world leadership. This does not mean that we must continually finance the deficits of other countries with Marshall plan dollars; such check-writing humiliates the recipients without necessarily solving their problems. The wiser thing to do is to attempt to create a natural balance between the hard money world and the soft money world—and the 10-point program just announced is at least a tentative approach.

Hurry Away, Senator!

Though some object to missions overseas by members of Congress as junkets at the taxpayers' expense, we think the country frequently gains much more than it pays out for such expeditions. Certainly trips to Europe woke up certain Senators and Representatives to the need for a real Voice of America program to offset the Russian propaganda. The Senate has just now approved the absence of one of its members for three weeks to investigate the displaced persons problem in Europe. That member is Pat McCarran of Nevada, who as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, has been a one-man block to a decent DP admissions law. We hope Senator McCarran drops everything else he is doing, flies to the displaced camps and becomes converted on the spot. Perhaps while he is abroad he will remember that the McCarrans were once DPs in Ireland.

Germany's New Government

The new German Government has taken the first step on the road of its destiny with the election of a coalition-backed President, Prof. Theodor Heuss. The combination of Christian Democrats, Free Democrats and the German party was able to muster 412 of the 800 votes cast in Bonn to insure his choice. Prof. Heuss will now appoint the architect of the coalition, Dr. Konrad Adenauer, as chancellor. Like the French premier, the German chancellor will overshadow the president.

Whether all votes in the new parliament will be as close as this one remains to be seen. It is certain, however, that new administration will be able to rule effectively only so long as its supporting combination stands firm. Dr. Adenauer's Christian Democrats have been described as somewhat to the right of our Republicans. The Free Democrats, however, carry their conservatism to the verge of reaction. And the German party is intensely nationalistic. The question is which element will set policy. Dr. Adenauer commands the most votes, but he has given hostages to fortune.

Secretary of State Acheson has expressed satisfaction over the way the German political picture is shaping up. He has discounted the coalition's nationalistic and anti-American campaign speeches as "normal manifestations of the democratic process." Perhaps such disturbing manifestations as demands for a return to the old imperial colors of red, white and black, the re-adoption of "Deutschland Ueber Alles" as the national anthem, and General Halder's book on Hitler—in which he seeks to build up the old myth of the invincibility of the German army—may pass.

But this is no time to overlook the fact that the new German president, as a member of the Weimar Reichstag, voted for the enabling act which gave dictatorial powers to Hitler. Surviving elements of the forces which backed the Nazis are backing the new regime. The British, as represented both by the leftish New Statesman and Nation and the conservative Economist, are apprehensive.

More encouraging is the knowledge that the new government will be stoutly anti-Communist. Also, it will have to contend with the spirited opposition of the Social Democrats (SPD). Flat predictions, one way or the other, are out of order. But the Germans certainly will bear watching as more and more power is delivered into their hands.

The Worst Crime

Senator John Foster Dulles and Congressman Emanuel Celler are disappointed and amazed by the American Bar Association's recent stand on genocide—the destruction of peoples. The bar's St. Louis convention was startling for the way it revealed opposition to international law.

If murder is bad, genocide is the multiplication of murder. What the bar did was to "abhor" the crime, but to oppose Senate ratification of the UN treaty that would establish genocide as a crime. Lawyers argued that the treaty would lead to foreign intervention and the overriding of domestic law in such cases as lynching.

The fact is that lynching is not genocide. Genocide is the systematic destruction of a people on racial, religious, cultural or other grounds. As for the bar's fear of superseding American law, Mr. Celler terms that "erroneous." The UN convention itself proclaims that it shall be ratified by nations "in accordance with their respective constitutions."

Some of the same lawyers who criticized the Nazi war crimes trials, on grounds that no law against genocide existed, now oppose the attempt to construct the necessary law. As Senator Dulles observes, "It is hard to see how a beginning can be made if the nations are not willing to ban the crime of genocide."

Beyond a solicitude for mistaken technicalities, the bar's debate indicated one brand of political isolationism. Ironically, it put the conservative bar association firmly on Russia's side of the argument. The Soviet Union opposes a world law against genocide with the same excuse of interference in domestic affairs.

Actually what Russia fears is the charge of the Baltic peoples that they are being destroyed, either by extermination or by the disruption of families. Russia is afraid that the UN will air this accusation. The UN showed its moral power when Pakistan accused India of genocide, and a UN commission helped end the slaughter of Moslems.

Australia, Norway, Iceland and Ethiopia have ratified the UN convention on genocide. UN debate suggests that the other 16 signatories needed to make the treaty effective are assured. And it is unlikely that the Bar Association's limited ideas will affect ratification by the United States Senate. The obvious place to begin building world justice is to outlaw the worst of crimes.

The Thinking of a Free Mind

The measure of a Supreme Justice is in the stand he takes in the decisions of the court and the way in which he takes his stand. In his short span of six years on our highest court, Mr. Justice Rutledge stood out as one of the freest men ever to serve on that bench. If he would have no part of a decision, he said just that. A sampling of his judicial writing appears under the cartoon on this page. The sound, solid body of work which it represents is the bequest of the mind and heart of Wiley Rutledge.

Case of Missouri vs. Fire

Gov. Smith's conferees on fire safety will find plenty of work cut out for them in the varied phases of the problem which they mean to attack, such as legislation, enforcement and finance. Under the heading of legislation they will find that state authorities have no power to close a hospital no matter how great the fire hazard.

Under the heading of enforcement, they will find that too often hazards are discovered but the offender doesn't correct them and the inspection agency can't or doesn't compel him to. Sometimes this problem is mixed with the problem of finance and the problem of finance is mixed with the problem of legislation. That is true at the St. Louis State Hospital.

A state legislative subcommittee found many hazards there on an inspection trip earlier this year and Supt. Kohler said the hazards had been cited in reports going back to 1941, together with recommendations for correcting them, but the funds to do it never had been supplied.

Disasters like the fires at the Buckingham Hotel annex here, the Coconut Grove night club in Boston, the La Salle Hotel in Chicago, the Wincoff Hotel in Atlanta and the Effingham (Ill.) hospital have all taught costly lessons and shocked people into a determination to act. How long did the determination last, and did it wear off or was it worked off? As we said a few months ago, it would be very constructive to have a follow-up six months after every such disaster to find out what has happened about the good resolutions that followed it.

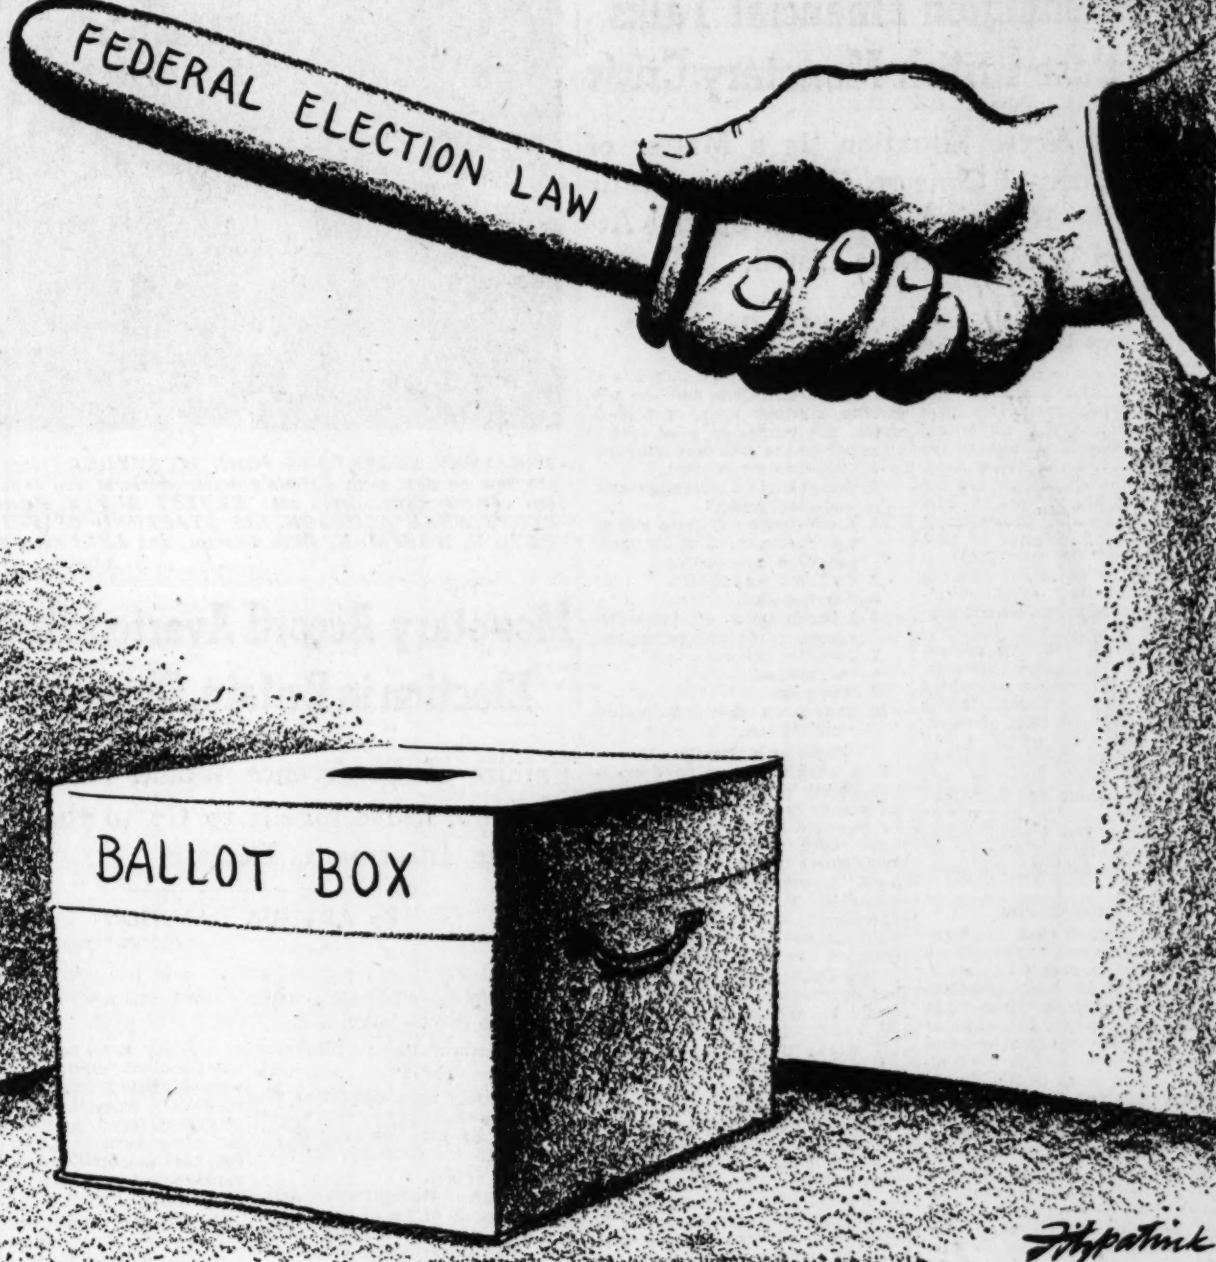

The Governor's conference on fire safety can do Missouri a real service by setting itself up as an indefatigable watchdog to make sure the lessons that have been learned are applied and don't have to be learned all over again.

In Behalf of Repetition

The season of doing what has been done before is still with us. After two months of pole sitters and channel swimmers, successful and unsuccessful, two Italian pilots have had to turn back in an effort to fly the Atlantic. It's true that they wanted to make the first east-west crossing in a single-engine plane, but oceanic flights are now routine. No highly imposing record awaited the outcome of what the Italians did, so why did they try to do it?

Maybe the postwar world has created a rather different kind of man. He is not content to demonstrate that he is better than everybody else. What he wants to prove is that he is just as good as anybody. He is somewhat tired of the demand for records, whether set by Coalbrook on a track or a B-29 over Hiroshima. He is baffled by 1949, more certain of 1929, and in a world more and more progressive and dangerous, he looks for satisfaction in the past.

If that is the case, pole sitting or solo flights are now a part of folklore. They are as old-fashioned and traditional, in the way of escape from it all, as a good meal, a good book, and bed.

TIME WE HAD THIS WATCHMAN

The Credo of Wiley Rutledge

Extracts from Opinions of the Late Supreme Court Justice

In the New Jersey school bus case of 1947, in which a bare majority of the court held that a state could furnish bus service to parochial schools, Justice Rutledge spoke for himself and Justices Frankfurter, Jackson and Burton, in a historical examination of the separation of church and state. One of his conclusions:

The reasons underlying the Amendment's policy have not vanished with time or diminished in force. Now as when it was adopted the price of religious freedom is double. It is that the church and religion shall live both within and upon that freedom. There cannot be freedom of religion, safeguarded by the state, and intervention by the church or its agencies in the state's domain, or dependency on its largesse.

The great condition of religious liberty is that it be maintained free from sustenance, as also from other interferences, by the state. When it comes to rest upon that secular foundation, it vanishes with the resting. Public money devoted to payment of religious costs, educational or other, brings the quest for more. It brings too the struggle of sect against sect for the larger share, or for any....

We have staked the very existence of our society on the faith that complete separation between the state and religion is best for the state and best for religion.

The rights of accused persons and those unfairly convicted were a deep concern of Justice Rutledge. His dissent opinion in the Marino case, 1947, focused attention upon the criminal procedure for persons not represented by counsel when convicted. Denouncing this, he said:

It would be nothing less than an abdication of our constitutional duty and function, to rebuff petitioners with this mechanical formula whenever it may become clear that the alleged state remedy is nothing but a procedural morass offering no substantial hope for relief. Experience has convinced me that this is true of Illinois. Only one rational conclusion may be drawn: That the Illinois procedural labyrinth is made up entirely of blind alleys, each of which is a step only as a means of convincing the federal courts that the state road which the petitioner has taken was the wrong one. (Following this blast, the situation was corrected, in part by a new rule of the Illinois Supreme Court, in part by the Legislature.)

In Payne and Foster vs. Illinois, also a right-to-counsel case, he said in dissent:

A system so callous of the rights of men, not only in their personal freedom but in their rights to trial, comporting with any conception of fairness as to tolerate such action, is in my opinion wholly contrary to the scheme of things the nation's charter establishes. Courts and judges, under that plan, owe something more than the negative duty to sit silent and blind while men go on their way to prison, for all that appears, for want of any hint of their rights.

The Taft-Hartley Act forbids unions to make political expenditures in national elections. When Philip Murray brought a test case by urging readers of a CIO newspaper to vote for a certain candidate, a Supreme Court majority of five justices held that the statute had not been violated. In Justice Rutledge's dissenting opinion (in which he was joined by Justices Black, Douglas and Murphy), the majority evaded a constitutional question that should have been decided for the defendant:

"Undue influence" in this connection may represent no more than convincing weight of argument fully presented, which is the very thing the Amendment and the electoral process it protects were intended to bring out. And one may question how far legislators may go in accurately assessing undue or disproportionate weight as distinguished from making accurate findings and conclusions concerning corruption....

A statute which, in the claimed interest of free speech and honest elections, curtails the very freedoms that make possible exercise of the franchise by an informed and thinking electorate, and does this by indiscriminate blanketing of every expenditure made in connection with an election... cannot be squared with the First Amendment. (United States vs. CIO, 1948.)

In the Schneiderman case, 1943, the court held that the Government could not revoke a man's naturalization because he was subsequently found to be a Communist. In defense of this majority view, Justice Rutledge said:

If 17 years after a federal court adjudged him entitled to be a citizen, that judgment can be nullified and he can be stripped of his most precious right, by nothing more than re-examination upon the merits of the very facts the judgment established, no naturalized person's citizenship is or can be secure.... No citizen with such a threat hanging over his head could be free. If he belonged to "off-color" organizations or held too radical, or, perhaps, too reactionary views, for some segment of the judicial palate, when his admission took place, he could not open his mouth without fear his words would be held against him....

His best course would be silence of hypocrisy. This is not citizenship.

When the court upheld the contempt citation of John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers, he wrote this paragraph and added the extemporaneous last line—"I want no part of this decision":

No man or group is above the law. All are subject to its valid commands. So are the governments and the courts. As I think, Congress has forbidden the use of labor injunctions in this and other cases, that conclusion is the end of our function. And if modification of that policy is to be made for such cases, that problem is for Congress in the first instance, not for the courts.

Expressing the minority opinion that the Japanese Gen. Yamashita had been sentenced to death for war crimes without a fair trial, he wrote:

It is not too early, it is never too early for the nation steadfastly to follow its great constitutional traditions.... This long held attachment makes the great divide between our enemies and ourselves.

Wiley Rutledge believed that the Fourteenth Amendment meant just what it said, that "no state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privilege of immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." His disturbance over the fact that the Court had applied this amendment to some constitutional guarantees and not to others is reflected in his dissent in Wolf vs. Colorado.

One should not reject a piecemeal wisdom, merely because it hobbles toward the truth with backward glances. Accordingly, although I think that all "the special rights" of the Bill of Rights should be carried over intact into the Fourteenth Amendment, I welcome the fact that the Court, in its slower progress toward this goal, today finds the substance of the Fourth Amendment "to be implicit in the concept of ordered liberty, and thus, through the Fourteenth Amendment... valid as against the states."

But I reject the Court's simultaneous conclusion, that the mandate embodied in the Fourth Amendment, although binding on the states, does not carry with it the one sanction—exclusion of evidence taken in violation of the Amendment's terms—failure to observe which means that "the protection of the Fourth Amendment... might as well be stricken from the Constitution."

Between Book Ends

Pioneer on the Columbia

From Copenhagen to Okanagan, by U. E. Fries. (The Coston Printer, 437 pp., $5.00.)

When a baseball player sets forth his experiences on the diamond, he has the assistance of a professional writer. The voice is the voice of Ralph Kiner, but the hand is the hand of an illustrious sports columnist.

What a pity this is not done for the men who hacked America out of the wilderness! Their deeds are the heritage of the nation, but so often they are allowed to put down these episodes in writing with only the most amateurish help.

Ulrick Fries is a Danish immigrant who settled along the frontier of the Upper Columbia river. He nearly married an Indian maiden, floated down the great stream on a raft and participated in the founding of innumerable towns.

Mr. Fries has had some aid in preparing his memoirs. But the aid has not been good enough. We see the trees but never the forest. Detailed experience is piled on detailed experience.

But the book is without any summing up. He rarely looks back and gives us the benefit of the insight into the conquering of the wilderness. Were the resources looted? What about government? Was it corrupt? Did immigrants have a fair chance? But in spite of its shortcomings as a literary effort, "From Copenhagen to Okanagan" is an excellent early history of the Columbia's higher reaches. Anyone who writes of Grand Coulee Dam today should read Mr. Fries' book about the Coulee uplands of yesterday.

Why is it, too, that on the American side the valley is the "Okanagan," but on the Canadian side the "Okanagan"? Other discrepancies in spelling squat on the international line. In British Columbia the river is the Kootenay but folks south of the border in Idaho insist on spelling it as "Kootenai." Perhaps these distinctions are necessary to preserve national identity.

The D.A.'s Toughest Case

THE D.A. BREAKS AN EGG, by Eric Stanley Gardner. (William Morrow & Co., 26 pp., $1.50.)

The first night that Dorothy Clifton was a guest at the home of her fiancé, Horace Lennox, there was a burglary in the Lennox house and the murder of a beautiful young woman nearby. In addition to Dorothy's car, which she had driven from Chicago, having figured in the murder, the deceased's purse was found in the car. So Dorothy was arrested. To further complicate matters the wrong woman was identified as the corpse. It was the toughest case that Doug Selby, District Attorney of Madison County, have ever encountered. Every way he turned his investigation was stopped by A. B. Carr, clever and unscrupulous lawyer. "You've got to break an egg to make an omelet," the D.A. told his assistants, Sylvia Martin and Sheriff Rex Brandon as he took a dangerous chance to solve the case. The story is Eric Stanley Gardner at his exciting best.

Pure and Simple

THE DEER STALKER, by Zane Grey. (Harper, $2.50.)

As might have been expected, Zane Grey's book is full of unchallengeable moral principles and flat aseptic prose. It concerns one Thad Eburne, who is a professional chaperon of large numbers of deer in the neighborhood of the Grand Canyon. Thad meets Patricia Edgerton, a refugee from New York's cafe society, at a critical moment in her life. She is tied to a tree and is being menaced by a villain "with big dirty hands." Thad rescues her, of course, and from then on events move—though not rapidly—to their predestined finish. This novel was serialized several years ago, but this is its first appearance in book form.

MARQUIS CHILDS

The Lively Ghost of Lord Keynes

JUST as with an insurance policy, you have to read the fine print in the report of the President's steel fact-finding board. The fine print, in this instance, is in a lengthy footnote dealing with a ghost.

It is a ghost that haunts American policy-makers and those who would influence that policy. In a footnote, Chairman Carroll R. Daugherty deals with the theories of the late Lord Keynes. Keynes urged deficit spending by government for public works as a cure for depression. Therefore the economic picture would grow darker.

Credited with greatly influencing the course of the New Deal, the Keynesian theory is championed by many former CIO New Dealers. The root of the argument presented to the board for the CIO Steel Workers' Union was that only by a wage increase could the "recession" be prevented from becoming a depression. With steel leading the way, this would be an increase throughout industry.

The Master.

The board rejected that argument. This is certain to have a marked effect on the status of ardent Keynesians within the Truman Fair Deal, conspicuously Leon Keyserling, one of the President's Council of Economic Advisors. It can also have important political consequences.

While rejecting any wage increase, the other two board members leave the delicate task of interpreting Keynes entirely to Daugherty. Far from being scornful of the brilliant British economist, he refers to him as "the Master."

Nor does he reject outright Keynes' basic theory. Rather, in a discussion of the interpretation of Keynes, he declares that Keynes never approved the idea of a wage increase to offset the threat of a depression.

Nathan's Dogmatism.

"The error," Daugherty writes, "appears to lie in carrying too dogmatically and rigidly the view of Keynes that wage rates in general are not only an element of firms' cost but also an element in the demand for firms' products. Many American Keynesians stress the demand side of wage-rate changes much more than the cost side. The business man, thinking mainly of his own enterprise and not much about the economy as a whole, emphasizes the cost element of such changes."

In the argument before the fact-finding board, the union insisted that more dollars would have to go in wages into the pockets of workers if they were to be able to keep on buying the products of America's vast industrial machine. This argument was documented at length by ex-New Dealer Robert R. Nathan, who was retained by the union for that purpose.

On the other side, the companies stoutly maintained that a boost in wages would mean a corresponding boost in prices. And with higher prices, the average citizen would be able to buy fewer goods. Therefore the economic picture would grow darker.

A Slight Sop.

Chairman Daugherty goes on to say that no one can really be sure of which of these two consequences would flow out of an increase. Daugherty concludes:

"The long-term need is for steady economic expansion. Because the effects of a wage-rate change under present conditions are unpredictable, it seems best not to tamper now with the general level of wage rates."

It is a slight sop to the Keynesians in the board's emphasis that its decision on wages applies only "under present conditions." If the companies' cost of manufacturing steel declines as a result of the modernization of plant and technique now going forward, then the companies will be faced with the necessity of lowering the price of their product or increasing the wages of their workers. Social insurance and pensions, in the board's interpretation, contribute to that stability of the economy at a high level of employment.

Powerful Force.

Lord Keynes' last visit to Washington before his death was in November of 1945. He was then helping to carry on negotiations for a loan to Britain. Keynes believed with deep conviction that a loan of less than five billion dollars would fail to restore England to financial solvency.

When a figure of $3,750,000,000 was agreed to and when certain monetary stipulations that he opposed were included in the terms, he returned to England with a gloomy prognosis made privately at the time seem to have been correct. It was too little, if not also too late. Nevertheless, as this latest instance shows, the Keynesian theory is a powerful force in contemporary life. The brilliant, witty ghost of an extraordinary prophet looks down on our time.

$64,689 HEART GRANT TO UNIVERSITIES HERE

Washington and St. Louis U. Get Part of $8,614,737 Research Fund.

Grants of $64,689 have been made to St. Louis University and Washington University for teaching and research in heart disease. It was announced simultaneously today in Washington and St. Louis.

St. Louis University grants amounted to $48,980, school officials said, and Washington University's grants totaled $15,709. The money is part of a fund of $8,614,737 awarded to 85 medical schools and research institutions in 34 states for intensified heart research, expanded teaching programs and construction of heart laboratories.

Surgeon General Leonard A. Scheele of the Public Health Service said the grants "mark the first broad-scale federal support of the attack on heart disease under the National Heart Institute of the Public Health Service."

Of the sum granted St. Louis University, $11,000 is for a research project under the direction of Dr. Albert Kuntz; $8700 is for research in the relationship between nerves and blood vessels; $17,000 for research in peripheral circulation under the direction of Dr. Alrick B. Hertzman, professor of physiology, and $14,000 for an expanded training program directed by Dr. E. Lee Schrader, associate professor of internal medicine.

All the work will be done at the medical school.

Washington University will receive $6177 for research under Dr. John R. Smith and $8532 for improving the training program under Dr. W. Barry Wood.

Surgeon General Scheele pointed out that the Heart Institute grants complement the programs of the American Heart Association and other non-governmental groups. Alone, he said, neither the privately-supported programs nor the federal effort would provide this urgently needed mobilization of forces against the leading cause of death in the United States.

Heart disease is regarded as the cause of about 650,000 deaths each year.

In addition to the other matters to be investigated by researchers, work will be done on dietary factors, new surgical methods, heredity and environment, new instruments, the usefulness of new drugs and substances, rheumatic fever and the possibility of perfecting a "mechanical heart" to replace the human organ during operations on it.

Mr. Uljee, 67 years old, died of a heart disease yesterday in Pirmin Desloge Hospital. He came to St. Louis from Holland in 1910 and served in World War I. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Uljee and a son, Bert Uljee.

Europe Would Not Be as Generous As U.S. in Giving Aid, Author Says

MR. AND MRS. KARL ESKELUND

Danish Visitor Here Gathering Data for Book Hopes to Correct Impression Americans Are Shylocks.

The American people would not fare so well if the United States were on the receiving end instead of the giving end of the Marshall plan, because Europeans are less generous, Karl Eskelund, Danish journalist and author, said yesterday.

Eskelund, his Chinese wife, Mrs. Chi-Yun Eskelund, and their 7-year-old daughter, Mei-Mei, have been guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. George Bloch, 555 North Central avenue, University City. They were scheduled to leave today for Detroit.

Eskelund, who is gathering material for a book on impressions of the American people, said that most Europeans think of Americans as "hard-boiled capitalists and Shylocks."

"I hope to correct this impression in my book," Eskelund said. "I have found American people easy going and generous in their judgments of people and their willingness to help people anywhere who need money."

"The Marshall plan is an amazing thing and I hope to make Europeans realize they should appreciate it more. If Europeans were doing the giving under the plan, Americans would not fare so well—we wouldn't be so generous."

Mrs. Eskelund, whom the author married in 1938 while serving with an American news bureau in Peking, said she gets a letter once a month from her mother, still living in Communist-occupied China.

"The attitude of the people there since the Communists came is 'wait and see,'" Mrs. Eskelund observed. "They were told the Reds would be terrible. So far they apparently have not been terrible. Now the people are waiting to see if they will become so. Most people in China don't care who's in power, anyway, just so they get something to eat."

Eskelund attended the University of Missouri School of Journalism in 1938-39.

He has served as a correspondent for American news services and foreign publications in China, India, China, Finland, Denmark, Norway and Romania. He is the author of several books, including "My Chinese Wife," which was translated into eight languages. Eskelund is 31 years old, his wife 30.

He and his family now make their home near Guatemala City, Guatemala.

61 UMBRELLAS TOP LIST OF ITEMS LEFT AT MUNICIPAL OPERA

Raincoats and Seven Men's Hats Among Articles Waiting for Owners.

Umbrellas, left at Municipal Theater on recent summer nights, and useful in the present autumn showers, are waiting for 61 owners at the city Park Department office, 330 Municipal Courts building. They are the major item in a rummage collection of 170 articles which have been removed from the theater to the downtown headquarters.

Seven men left their hats, 17 coats and women's jackets and raincoats were abandoned on the seats, with seven pairs of white gloves. Eleven persons abandoned their glasses, and six others left spectacle cases. House and automobile keys, two necklaces, two bracelets and a fountain pen were among articles which their owners are still getting along without.

The umbrellas and raincoats are supposed to have been taken to the show on nights which looked threatening, but which cleared up before the final chorus. Rain stopped the performances on only two nights in the season.

STATE BUILDING SITE ORDERED CONDEMNED

Owner of Tracts Seeks $235,000—Too High, Says Gov. Smith.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 13.—The State Board of Public Buildings directed Attorney General J. E. Taylor last night to begin condemnation proceedings to acquire a site near the Capitol for a proposed new $3,500,000 state office building. The board decided the price asked by the owners of the land was too high.

Owners of the five tracts and buildings involved are asking for a total of $235,000 for their property, which is assessed for taxation purposes at a total valuation of $23,100.

"The asking price is at least $60,000 more than the probable value," said Gov. Forrest Smith, chairman of the board, in announcing condemnation proceedings would be used to acquire the tract. The vote of the board was two to one on selection of the site, on the south side of Capitol avenue, between Jefferson street and the Governor's Hotel. The site fronts a block occupied by the executive mansion and a state-owned parking way.

Smith and Lt. Gov. James T. Blair voted for acquisition of this site, the Governor said. Attorney General Taylor, the third member, voted no. Taylor advocated construction of the new building on part of a state-owned parking way between the Capitol and executive mansion.

Three other sites near the Capitol were considered, each of them priced at $24,000 or more.

Smith said Gov. Taylor, who is a member of the board, voted no. Taylor advocated construction of the new building on part of a state-owned parking way between the Capitol and executive mansion.

ISADORE GROTHE, EX-SHERIFF OF ST. CHARLES COUNTY, DIES

Isadore Grothe, former sheriff of St. Charles county, died of heart disease last night at St. Joseph Hospital, St. Charles, after a four-day illness. He was 63 years old and lived at 723 Water street, St. Charles.

Formerly a farmer, Mr. Grothe became a deputy sheriff in 1919 and was elected sheriff in 1920. At the end of the four-year term he again became a deputy, under his brother, John. When John died in 1927 Isadore was named sheriff at a special election and was re-elected in 1928 for another four-year term.

He figured prominently in the investigation leading to the arrest of David A. Miller, later hanged for the murder of Miss Pauline Duebert in an attempted robbery at her home. Mr. Grothe also solved several bank robberies while in office. Recently he had been employed as an elevator operator at the American Car & Foundry Co. plant at St. Charles. Surviving are his wife and a son, Robert. Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. Thursday at St. Peter Catholic Church, St. Charles, with burial in the church cemetery.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

MISS MARIE CHRISTY JOHNSON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lee Johnson, Huntleigh Village, met family friends at a reception late this afternoon at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Oscar Johnson, 38 Portland place.

Huge clusters of magnolia leaves, sent from the senior Mrs. Johnson's family home at Holly Springs, Miss., covered the mantel in the living room where Miss Johnson received the several hundred guests with her mother and grandmother. Shell pink antherium blossoms in a silver bowl, flanked by large silver candelabras and encircled by more of the magnolia leaves, decorated the table in the dining room. The formal stardom, beyond the living room where small tables, centered with hurricane lamps and magnolia leaves, were grouped around a large fountain, was open to the guests' bouquets of muscades provided music during the afternoon.

Miss Johnson wore a bouffant frock of two-toned tulle, white over coral pink. The scalloped top of the dress was distinguished by coral-colored embroidery and a deep band of darker coral velvet which outlined the front of the bodice and extended into streamers at the back. French applique of tulle on the bodice, at the neckline and down the front of the skirt further emphasized the beauty of the gown. The debutante's bouquets were composed of white roses and pink vanda orchids.

Mrs. James Lee Johnson wore a gown of blue crepe and black lace. Miss Sallie Mather Busch chose a dress of black lace. Both wore white orchid corsages.

Alternating at the tea table were Miss Diane Goessling, Miss Eleanor Chouteau Johnson, and her brother, James Lee Jr. She will make her formal debut at a ball on New Year's eve at the St. Louis Country Club.

Mrs. and Mrs. Edmund V. Cowdry, 5044 Westminster place, who for many years have been at home to friends on Christmas day, will, this year, introduce their daughter informally that afternoon. Guests will be invited from 4 to 6 o'clock. The debutante and her parents returned yesterday from Woods Hole, Mass. She spent the summer there while her parents were at the resort for the past month following a trip to Europe. Miss Cowdry will leave Sept. 26 to resume her studies at Wellesley College.

Parties for Debutantes. HIS week, before many of the debutantes return to finishing schools and colleges, there is a full social calendar of breakfasts, luncheons, teas and other festivities in their honor.

A luncheon was given today at Bellevue Country Club for Miss Mary Rogers Cunningham, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Cunningham, at which Mrs. John C. Harris, her daughter, Miss Margaret Harris, and Mrs. Jerome F. Kircher were hostesses. Tomorrow, two young women will meet their mothers' friends at teas at their homes from 4 to 6 o'clock. They are Miss Carolyn Costen, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James E. Costen, 36 Pointe aux Lacs, and Miss Nancy Waldron Schaberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lester Schaberg, 5280 Westminster place.

Miss Costen will enter her senior year at Bryn Mawr College later in the month and Miss Schaberg, who will be presented to her contemporaries at a tea dance Dec. 26 at the University Club, will leave St. Louis next week for her sophomore year at Bryn Mawr College.

The evening, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford P. McKinney will entertain a group of young people at a cocktail party at Bellevue Country Club in honor of Miss Margaret Huttig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Huttig.

Mrs. Arthur Taylor and her daughter, Miss Anne Taylor, will give a luncheon Thursday at Glen Echo Country Club in honor of Miss Diane Goessling, daughter of the Gerald A. Goesslings, to society. The first, a tea, will be given by her grandmother, Mrs. Val J. Goessling, a family friend, and the second, a buffet supper and dance, will be given later by her parents.

Mrs. Daniel Upthegrove, 21 Kingsbury place, will be hostess at a tea on Friday, at which her granddaughter, Miss Frances Anne Johnston, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Johnston, will make her bow to society. A cocktail party that evening will be given by Mr. and Mrs. George Engelmann Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Karl K. Volkmann, the Engelmanns, 32 Woodcliff road.

Ladue, for Miss Corinne Froemke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald W. Froemke, and Miss Huttig.

Miss Froemke will be presented to society with Miss Cunningham the following day at a tea dance given by their parents at the St. Louis Woman's Club and that night, Miss Jean Claire Muckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Muckerman, will be introduced at a dance at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Christopher H. Muckerman, Geyer road, with whom she and her parents live.

CHEAPER WAYS TO MINE COLORADO OIL SHALES FOUND

Test Run Shows Cost to Be Only 32.9 Cents a Ton, Say Engineers.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 (AP)—Engineers have found out how to mine Colorado's oil shales cheaply, Bureau of Mines Director James Boyd said today.

In a recent four-week test run at the bureau's Rifle (Colo.) experimental mine, Boyd said, 29,885 tons of oil shale was mined at a direct cost of only 32.9 cents a ton.

"This is conclusive proof that the mining-cost problem has been solved," Boyd said.

Mining cost has been one of the major bars to the development of the vast western underground supplies of oil shale. Mining costs must be kept at a minimum because of the cost of the processing of shale, after mining, to produce oil.

Boyd said one of the important aids to cheaper mining was the substitution of 15-foot drill rods for the 11-foot drill rods previously used on multiple drill units. Other aids have been the development of a mobile compressor assembly, designed for easy movement about the mine, new methods increasing blasting efficiency, and reduction in the cost of drill bits.

In the recent test, production was increased to 111 tons a man-day for underground labor and $2.7 tons for all labor.

ALL-OR-NOTHING RACE IS PROSPECT FACING BOB TAFT

Views on the record. His views, in the main, are well known, and his friends and enemies agree. But Senator Taft is bringing them up to date, polishing them a little here and a little there, conscious of the fact that although Ohio is only one of 48 states it could be the principal state which stands between this action of President Taft and his ambition to do as dad did.

Between now and next January, Taft intends to cover all of Ohio's 88 counties from Lake Erie to the Ohio river. He says he is "very pleased" with his tour to date.

"I explain my position, I deal with the issues, I find a very enthusiastic response, both in the urban and rural areas," says Taft.

Senator Taft refuses to apologize for the Taft-Hartley labor law. He tells reporters that he found a very general opinion that it has not hurt labor any, and that so far as attacks of the labor leaders on the law are concerned, it is an instance of much ado about nothing.

He asserts the unions now have a million more members and have better wages, hours and working conditions than ever before. Nothing has happened, as Taft sees it, except "the elimination of abuses and the arrival of more equality."

Public Not Well Informed.

Taft reports he has received many letters pro and con regarding the Taft-Hartley law. But he says sadly the public shows little knowledge of the legislation, or the proposed revisions to meet justifiable criticisms.

With some pride of authorship, Taft says that whereas his sponsorship of the Taft-Hartley law excites comment from one side and another, his somewhat critical attitude toward the North Atlantic pact and the European military assistance program fails to arouse Ohio.

"I haven't had anybody ask me a question or talk about it," Taft reports.

"There seems to be no interest at all."

If such be the case, the fate of Senator Taft, who aspires to be the second president, Taft, is likely to be decided by the people of Ohio largely on the issue of the Taft-Hartley labor legislation.

HOFFMAN FAVORS ECONOMIC UNION ON CONTINENT

a project is for all sorts of reasons impractical. All of these conclusions dovetail, pointing in the same direction—a determined, all-out American drive for continental union.

No final, formal policy decisions have been taken. Averell H. Hoffman, European ECA chief, is worried about the reaction in Europe to what might seem overt American interference in European affairs. Some of the free-trade advocates in the State Department's economic division are also doubtful on the ground that such a union would work against free, multilateral trade. But despite these hesitations, a great deal of serious thought is already being given to what form such a union might take.

The sort of thing now being discussed is a limited initial union of Italy, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, with western Germany and possibly the Scandinavian countries brought in later. It is not proposed that any attempt be made to level tariff barriers or allow the free exchange of populations, at least at first. Anything so ambitious would probably lead to the failure of the whole project.

Instead, what is proposed is the establishment of a single currency at an agreed exchange rate with all the participating national currencies, and the creation of a central bank. The bank would be capitalized, of course, in the new European currency, but it would also dispose of an initial revolving fund of $150,000,000 which ECA would make available.

Even this is far from unambitious. A common currency and central banking system involve a transfer of sovereignty such as no nation in modern history has voluntarily made, since these measures sharply limit the control of national credit. It is hard to believe that anything so fundamental and far-reaching can really be undertaken in a few short months.

Get that KRUSCHEN feeling!

KRUSCHEN is world-famous as a finer, gentler saline laxative. At all drug stores. Effervescent or Still.

Yet the experts who favor this plan point to certain facts. In the first place, the Council of Europe talks at Strasbourg have shown that there are already powerful forces working toward union on the continent, though not in Britain. In the second place, there is the whiplash of economic necessity. The British crisis is only a more visible symptom of a general European crisis—continental dollar deficits are running at two and a half times the rate of British deficits.

So far this combination of circumstances has led to little but talk. But the stick of American pressure, astutely applied together with the carrot of an ECA offer of a $150,000,000 revolving fund, might well transform the talk into action. No one argues that continental economic union would solve the continent's economic problems overnight. Yet it would be an enormous stride in the right direction. And it is at least encouraging that the American policy-makers are beginning to think in big, bold terms. It remains to formulate an equally bold and far-reaching policy to deal with the economic crisis of Britain and the sterling area. For if Britain founders, the continent, whether united or divided, will founder too.

15 CZECH PRIESTS REPORTED HELD IN ANTI-CHURCH MOVE

PRAGUE, Sept. 13 (AP)—Church and diplomatic sources said yesterday 15 Roman Catholic priests have been arrested in the last two weeks in a government move to smash a secret church network of communications linking priests and bishops.

"There is no doubt about it," one informant said. "That's why the arrests were made." The source declared, however, that the church's communication system was not formed for political purposes.

Catholic and diplomatic sources said the Communist government has deprived the church of normal means of keeping in touch with priests.

WORLD GOVERNMENT CERTAIN, C. O. F. C. SPEAKER SAYS

"World government is completely inevitable—as inevitable as a mother-in-law," Allan M. Cranston, president of the United World Federalists, told the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce members' assembly yesterday at a luncheon in the Hotel Statler.

The real question, he said, is the kind of government the world will have—a one-power dictatorship following a third World War or a democratic federation of nations in time to prevent another conflict.

Cranston, who remarked that he was forced to support United States re-armament "in an anarchistic world," briefly outlined the World Federalist program for strengthening the United Nations.

BILLION RISE IN STOCK VALUES IN BUYING WAVE

NEW YORK, Sept. 13 (AP)—An enthusiastic wave of buying pushed the stock market sharply higher today. A billion dollars was added to market values on a full point rise in index figure.

The advance was Wall Street's response to the labor-management truce in the steel industry.

Prices were up by fractions to more than two points, and in some cases the rise ran as much as 3 points among leading issues.

The volume of trading hit the high rate of around 1,700,000 shares, one of the best days of the year. Steels were in the van in trading activity and made substantial price gains.

Stock sales in the first hour of trading were 200,000 shares; second hour, 340,000; third hour, 270,000; fourth hour, 200,000; and final hour, 530,000.

Enthusiasm was built up by progress being made toward settlement of labor-management differences in the steel industry. At the same time there was a favorable reaction to proposals made in Washington to help the British Empire out of its difficulties and to straighten out overvalued foreign currencies.

The lead established by steels was followed by oils, rails, motors and chemicals. Gold shares turned down slightly. Proposals made in Washington and elsewhere for raising the price of gold from the present level of $35 a fine ounce have been received with marked coolness.

It was a broad market and of 1114 issues totaled 843 rose, 89 declined and 182 were unchanged.

HEAVY RAINS CAUSE HIGH WATER IN NORTH MISSOURI

North Grand Rises 14.5 Feet Overnight—Other Streams Affected.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 13 (AP)—Heavy rains sent rivers in North Missouri near above flood stage today, but only slight overflows were forecast.

The North Grand river rose 14.5 feet overnight to a stage of 19 feet, only a foot above flood level, at Chillicothe. The stream was expected to crest five feet above flood stage this afternoon.

At Galatin the North Grand was expected to reach bank full tomorrow. Crests of four feet above flood level were forecast for Sumner tomorrow afternoon and at two feet above at Brunswick Thursday morning.

The Chariton, one foot above flood level at Novinger this morning, was expected to crest four feet above tomorrow. At Keytesville the crest was expected at one foot above some time Thursday.

The Thompson fork of the Grand river at Trenton was falling this morning after cresting at 12.5 feet late yesterday. Flood stage there is 15 feet. The stage at 8:30 a.m. was 9.35.

The Weldon river, which joins the Thompson just north of Trenton, and Muddy creek also were receding.

The Missouri river, well below flood stage at St. Joseph and Kansas City, was expected to reach a crest near bankfull at Booneville Thursday morning time at Jefferson City Thursday evening.

TRUCK DRIVER IS FINED $425 ON FOUR TRAFFIC CHARGES

George Parker, Negro, truck driver of 1833 North Garrison avenue, was fined a total of $425 and his driver's license was suspended one year today by Police Judge James H. Connor after Parker was found guilty of four traffic violations.

He was fined $200 for driving while intoxicated and his driver's license was suspended. He also was fined $100 for leaving the scene of an accident, $100 for careless driving and $25 for going through a major stop sign.

Parker was arrested last Aug. 25, after City Fireman John King saw his truck go through a stop sign at South Compton and Shennandoah avenues, speed across the intersection, strike a parked car and continue south on Compton. One of the policemen who finally caught up with the truck in answer to King's telephone call, testified Parker was intoxicated. Parker denied this and said his truck did not strike a parked machine. He will appeal.

JENNINGS CITY COUNCIL VOTES 5 PCT. TAX ON BUS INCOMES

The Jennings city council passed ordinances last night levying a 5 per cent tax on the gross income of motor buses and an inspection fee on installation and repair of heating and air-conditioning equipment.

The motor bus tax, which will affect the Public Service Co., St. Louis County Transit Co. and the Broadway-Ferguson Bus Co., will be figured on fares collected within the city limits. The inspection fee will be paid by the installer or repairer of heating or air-conditioning equipment.

Both measures were adopted last night by Mayor Oliver Koenehan. The council said it did not know how much revenue the taxes would provide.

COAST GUARD CHIEF GUEST OF THE PROPELLER CLUB

Adm. Joseph F. Farley, commandant of the United States Coast Guard, was a guest of the St. Louis Propeller Club, an organization of individuals interested in transportation by freight by water, at the Mark Twain Hotel last night. He was in St. Louis in connection with the Western Rivers Panel of the Merchant Marine Council, which ended yesterday.

Adm. Farley, who will retire next Jan. 1, was accompanied by Rear Adm. H. C. Shapard, chief of the Coast Guard's engineering safety section. Another guest at the dinner was Chester C. Thompson, president of the American Waterways Operators, a trade group.

$175,000 SUIT RETRIAL DENIED

The Missouri Supreme Court denied a new trial to Mrs. Madeline Mavrakos, vice president of the Mavrakos Candy Co., in her $175,000 damage suit against the candy firm and the Ladue Contracting Co. on account of injuries suffered in an automobile accident, in a decision handed down at Jefferson City yesterday.

She had filed a motion for a new trial in Circuit Judge James E. McLaughlin's court after a jury found in favor of the defendant companies, which were represented by counsel for insurance companies. Mrs. Mavrakos was injured when an automobile owned by the candy firm and driven by her husband, John Mavrakos, headed off the truck, collided with a leaded Co. truck in 1946.

TEXT OF 3-NATION COMMUNIQUE ON WASHINGTON TALKS

Proposals for liberalizing trade with countries with which it did not have balance of payments difficulties, and raised the question whether the provisions of section 9 of the Anglo-American financial agreement, and article 5 of the Anglo-Canadian financial agreement presented an obstacle to such a plan. It was the view of the United States and Canadian delegations that such liberalization of United Kingdom import regulations should be considered since the United Kingdom shortage of dollars should not in itself force the United Kingdom to reduce its purchases from areas with which it does not have a balance of payments difficulty. It was agreed that any United Kingdom import regulations as they affect United States and Canadian products would be the subject of continuing review by representatives of the three governments through continuing facilities for consultation.

12C Tues. Sept. 13, 1949 ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

atives of the three governments through continuing facilities for consultation.

Sterling Balances.

13. (A) A further subject which was discussed was the United Kingdom liability represented by the sterling balances of other countries. A large number of countries has been accustomed to hold either all or a part of their foreign exchange reserves in the form of sterling. The existence and availability of such holdings is an integral feature of the widespread multilateral use of sterling for the purpose of financing international trade. One of the problems of the postwar period has been the existence of exceptionally large accumulations of sterling which were built up, mainly during the war, as the result of payments by the United Kingdom for goods and services purchased overseas in furtherance of the common war effort. In June 1945 these balances amounted to $13½ billion. Since then, there have been considerable reductions both in the total and in the holdings of individual countries, though the amount outstanding at the end of 1948 was approximately the same as in June 1945.

(B) In principle, the whole of these balances represents a charge on United Kingdom production of goods and services. In practice, however, a substantial proportion will continue to be held as reserves by the countries concerned. To the extent that the balances are liquidated, some proportion of United Kingdom production of goods and services is used to discharge this liability instead of to pay for current imports of goods and services.

(C) This whole problem in its various aspects, including the necessity to provide capital goods for development, was discussed in a preliminary way on the basis of prior technical examination by the experts of the three governments. It was agreed that this was one of the subjects which concerned other countries and would require further study.

14. Investigation of the ways in which the sterling area could move toward a position in which it could earn its own way led to the discussion of other special problems, including petroleum and shipping—two important elements in the sterling area balance of payments picture. The United Kingdom representatives set forth the facts of the very large dollar deficit which the sterling area presently incurs because of oil transactions, and their desire to reduce this deficit to the minimum possible level. It was mutually recognized that the question of oil production and refining, and geographical distribution raised problems of extreme complexity involving the protection of legitimate interests of the major producing countries and companies. The ministers recognized that these two questions of petroleum and shipping could not be resolved in the short time available to them, and that further study would be required. In the case of petroleum, they agreed to appoint representatives to analyze the facts and to provide the basis for subsequent discussions.

Agreement on Objective.

15. There has been agreement on the objective toward which policies should be directed and agreement on certain immediate steps which will be taken to bring that objective nearer. There are, however, as has been emphasized, a number of questions requiring closer examination than this short conference has allowed. It is proposed, therefore, to continue the examinations, initiated during the conference, of questions on which it is hoped that useful understanding can be reached under the direction of the present ministerial group. These arrangements for continuing consultation—supplementing the usual channels of communication between governments—will be used to keep under review the effectiveness of actions already agreed upon and to prepare, for governmental consideration, measures which could carry further those adjustments which are considered to be necessary. In establishing these arrangements for continuing consultation, the three governments wish to emphasize that these arrangements underline rather than diminish their interest in the development of economic co-operation within the entire community of western nations. The tripartite arrangements will not in any way encroach upon, or detract from, the area of competence of the OEEC and other existing organs of international economic collaboration. On the contrary, these arrangements for continuing consultation, by contributing materially to the solution of problems which today adversely affect the working of the entire OEEC group and yet are not susceptible of solution within that group, will facilitate the progress of economic collaboration in the wider field.

Real Contribution Made.

16. In summary, the ministers of the three countries concerned are satisfied that a real contribution to the solution of the sterling-dollar difficulties has been made by the conclusions recorded above. They are confident that, with sustained efforts on all sides and with the seizure of every opportunity by sterling area exporters to enter into and remain in dollar markets which are open to them, there is the prospect of reaching a satisfactory equilibrium between the sterling and dollar areas by the time exceptional dollar aid comes to an end.

Hughes vs. Rossellini

Fight Over Film Has Ingrid in the Middle

By George Weller

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1949.

ROME, Italy, Sept. 12. THAT volcanic Stromboli film has erupted again and is spitting love, fire and legal language all over Hollywood-by-the-Tiber. Unless somebody even sweeter than Ingrid Bergman can wheedle Roberto Rossellini into surrendering to Howard Hughes the opening 10 minutes of "after the storm," which he has hidden, the Eternal City's fathers may have to postpone Holy Year until the air gets clearer.

The jiu-jitsu over where thousands of feet of exposed film shall be cut and who shall wield the scissors seems like a press agent's farce until one approaches within swinging distance of the embittered principals.

At ringside, however, it is recognizable as a genuine struggle between Hollywood's mercurial financier in defense of a $1,000,000 investment and Italy's most talented director for his art, his money, his star and his possible future wife.

Trapped in the middle is Ingrid, pleading for peace, while her farewell film, still dismembered, migrates like a tribal totem between caches on both sides of the Atlantic.

Ingrid having split with RKO officials here over their stiff attitude toward Rossellini, telephones Hughes regularly. Her last call to Hollywood was made Wednesday. Ingrid and Rossellini dine here with Greta Garbo and they are rivaling that shy siren in inaccessibility.

IN THE FOOTAGE WHICH Rossellini has buried Ingrid meets her audience as a bruised refugee in a camp for stateless women which actually exists at Farfa near Rome. By an opportunist marriage to a poor fisherman she escapes the barbed wire but is spiritually redeemed only through sharing his poverty on the smoking shores of Stromboli.

Rossellini is withholding the camp scenes, he says, because the Italian Government demands the right to censor them. RKO's soured operatives here, however, charge Rossellini with refusing even to develop the sequence for censorship in order to get a hammerlock on Hollywood and thereby escape from an earlier promise to go there.

When the Stromboli production lagged with its Italian production boss dead of suffocation on volcano's peak and Bergman's $17,500 weekly salary giving the auditors concern, Hughes sent Harold Lewis, hustling veteran producer, to needle Rossellini into more speed and less spear-fishing with Ingrid. Rossellini signed a pledge to deliver all the finished footage to RKO's lawyer here, Ercole Grazzadei, and did, until the Farfa scenes which he halted.

RKO agreed to boost the budget from $600,000 to what later proved to be $1,000,000 and not to sue Rossellini for overtime which eventually ran 63 days beyond the scheduled 66.

Two separate, but similar negatives were made. One was flown to Hollywood, the other retained by Rossellini for his guidance. Lewis last week took possession of Rossellini's copy in a surprise raid on the latter's laboratory, incensing the Italian.

THE CELLULOID BATTLE is complicated by the vexed marital status of Ingrid and Roberto. While RKO press agents here were still upholding with folky details Ingrid's assertion in May that she would rejoin her husband soon, Ingrid announced Aug. 5 she was seeking a divorce from Dr. Peter Lindstrom of Hollywood.

A joint return to the United States by Rossellini and Bergman became impractical in terms of the expected onslaught by the press and painful encounter with Ingrid's beloved daughter Pia. Rossellini then jolted RKO by asking that the vital splicing task be transferred back to Rome because he declines to absent himself from Ingrid.

Hughes, Hollywood's best-armed bachelor, took the attitude, according to RKO here, that the picture required his scissors as well as Rossellini's. It was the director's duty to journey to California and not his to go to Rome, according to contract, even if the Italian faced disagreeable legal or other action from Ingrid's husband.

The Italian Government has now peppered this minefield by stopping Lewis from shipping to the United States the negative which he lifted from Rossellini's studio. Rossellini's lawyer got the export ban by claiming that the negative actually belongs not to RKO, but to Rossellini's and Bergman's Italian subcorporation, Berit. Berit is an affiliate of Bero, the American parent corporation headed by Lou Wassermann of the Musical Corporation of America. Bero is financed by RKO which promises Bergman and Rossellini 37.5 per cent of the profits and itself gets the rest.

THE LATEST TERMS Ingrid has obtained from Hughes by trans-Atlantic phone are that Hughes will waive Rossellini's obligation to go to Hollywood provided Rossellini surrenders all the negatives, especially the Farfa scenes and completes the semi-final cutting operating in Rome. Hughes retains the final surgical rights in Hollywood.

Art Cohn, writer on the film, is attempting to persuade Rossellini to accept these terms even though they mean the Italian must relinquish the prized authority over his best known and Ingrid's final picture.

Edging Rossellini toward decision, RKO officials have phoned from Hollywood that they will sever the picture's head if Rossellini further delays submitting the Farfa scenes to Italian censorship.

What Am I Saying!

AN item from Mandan, N. D., tells of the court's dropping a charge of impersonating an officer when the defendant explained that the "FBI" he signed after his name meant "Full Blooded Indian"! Well, you can't blame him for making it clear that he's full-blooded. In Hollywood recently the Indian extras went on the war-path when a producer cut their pay in half on the ground that they were half-breeds!

Fire Sweeps Burlington Trestle Near St. Charles

In this aerial view, smoke rises from a Burlington Railroad trestle over Lake Meris Temps Clair, five miles north of St. Charles, which was swept by fire early today, causing rerouting of all the system's trains in and out of St. Louis. At right end of 300-foot span is a pump in which volunteer firemen from St. Charles reached the scene—inaccessible by highway—after driving over the railroad for two and a half miles.

Helicopter pilot Ted Leopold, who was crop-dusting nearby, flew to the spot and dropped a rope to which the pair tied themselves. The rescue photo was made by a passerby, R. T. Johnson, camera company executive. Below, Loretz is comforted by his wife after being brought ashore. With them is Roy Herling of the Golden Gate Coast Guard unit.

Broadway, Elsewhere

By Jack Lait

THE dog-watch editor sat alone in the big editorial room, where at the peak hours a hundred men worked frantically. This was the overnight trick on an afternoon daily. The job consisted mostly of answering drunks who called from barrooms to settle bets, preparing the work schedules for the early morning shift and making up some inside pages to get part of the sheet into the forms early.

The dog-watch editor was a young fellow named Lait, who came on at midnight. Lait was accustomed to drunken pests and freaks with missions, such as wander into newspaper offices at any hour. He handled his share of beefs and offers of stories that "will double your circulation."

HE HAD hardly sat himself down when he heard footsteps, solid and rapid. He looked up to see approaching, at him rather than toward him, a chunky, square-shouldered man, in a shiny dark suit and under a beaten-up derby hat.

"My name is Bill McMonigle," said the caller, belligerently. "See this piece here?" And he held up a copy of the last run off the press. I had read it. It was by our staff humorist, a good one.

IT TOLD of an episode in police court, reciting that Mrs. William McMonigle had caused her husband's arrest, charging he had beaten her with the leg of a chair, which he had torn off for that purpose, and that she had "torn handfuls of his hair out" in frantic self-defense.

"This a dastardly lie," spat McMonigle, who was sober and sore.

"What is?"

"The hair part of it. She said she tore out my hair with her hands. She tried, but I laid 'er out."

He took off the dicer, bent down, turned his head every which way.

"You see any hair missin'?" he demanded.

I didn't. I so said.

"You bet. They ain't no woman, least of all my woman, gonna yank no hair out of the scalp of Bill McMonigle. An' your paper is gonna say so. I'm a bricklayer. I got to go on the job tomorrow. The rest of the boys is gonna kid the overalls off o' me, letting a female pull out my hair. Dat's what she said. Your paper don't say she didn't."

I picked up the telephone and called in Frank Burke, our night photographer. He brought his grafex-box, his tripod and his flash powder.

"Frank," I said, "this is Bill McMonigle. He wants me to print that he has all his hair. I am not only going to print it, I am going to prove it. Now you take close-ups from every angle, completely around his head. The camera can't lie."

BURKE CLIMBED UP on a desk, to get altitude. McMonigle posed for about a dozen shots, completing the circle.

"There," I said. "That will show who lost any hair."

"I don't believe you'll run it," said McMonigle. "I don't trust you newspaper people."

I assured him it would be in the early edition. And it was.

I spread it across the whole top of a page. A strip of cuts showed his dome, the whole 360 degrees. The headline, below, on the side, read:

McMONIGLE HAS EVERY HAIR—

110,000—COUNT 'EM!

I had looked up in the encyclopedia the number of hairs in the human head. I quoted the indignant denial that even one was missing, and his challenge to any lady, attacking or defending.

I gave his version, verbatim, of efforts in that direction by Mrs. McMonigle and her futile efforts to tell the bricklayer's pride in his brick-red hair; I described the brawl, as he had freely detailed it—how he had parted his good wife's hair with the chair leg, but not one hair of his own was mussed.

"WOULD THE JUDGE o' fined me $10 an' costs if she had o' got her licks in, too?" he had asked me, and so I wrote. "Would she be able to come into court at all if she had o' tore one hair o' me out, I wanna know now? Or wouldn't I o' snatched her bald-headed an' then got sore an' done somethin' serious?"

I had fun writing it. The office thought it amusing and it ran all day, which was unusual for bulldog copy. When I came to work again, at midnight, I had a cop's nightstick at my elbow. The sensitive McMonigle might pay me another call.

He did. He came straight for me. I kicked the chair back and stood, my hand near the club, ready to die fighting.

"You write this?" he boomed, pointing to the page he held. "I did," I gulped. McMonigle pulled back his horny paw—then stuck it out.

"Shake," he invited. "You're a man. A man o' your word. I didn't think you'd do it so square an' so han'some. . . . Have a cigar!"

Social Problems

By Emily Post

A MOTHER-TO-BE asks: "My husband and I are separated. I don't believe there ever can be a reconciliation. I'm going to have a baby soon and don't want to send Mr. and Mrs. — announcements. Do I just send them in my own name and should it be as Mrs. John — or Mrs. Anne — or do you think I should send any?"

Answer: The original conventional announcement would be best. It was merely the mother's visiting card with the little card for the baby tied to it, and did not include the father. I think this type of announcement would emphasize the situation less than in writing your name alone on the ready-made fill-in announcements.

DEAR MRS. POST: At what age is it proper for a girl to take part in a wedding as a junior bridesmaid? Someone tells me you have said from seven to 14. But it seems to me that a girl of seven or eight is too young to put in a modified copy of the bridesmaids' dresses.

Answer: It depends on the size rather than the age of the child. If she is very little she is a flower girl. If she is very big she is a junior bridesmaid—dressed in a dress suitable to her age but of the same material and color as those of the bridesmaids.

DEAR MRS. POST: It is customary here for a hostess to stipulate the type of clothes her guests are to wear. We find this is simpler. But I've just received an invitation to a general reception (evening) at the country club to celebrate a wedding anniversary, which merely says "cotton" at the bottom of the invitation. Does this mean I have to wear a cotton dress? And what kind?

Answer: I think this undoubtedly refers to the wedding year that is to be celebrated (second is cotton) and means that you take a present of cotton. At any rate, it would be most unusual for a hostess to stipulate the materials that her guests are expected to wear.

DEAR MRS. POST: Don't you honestly believe that when someone receives a wedding invitation from a distance, it is purely and simply a bid for a present?

Answer: No, on the contrary! Such an invitation carries no obligation whatever but is merely a courteous way of letting someone know he would be welcome were he able to be present. Sending a gift is entirely a question of personal impulse.

They'll Do It Every Time

Take My Word for It

By Frank Colby

TODAY'S teen-agers have been writing such a blood-stained record of carnage by automobile that they have added a ghastly new word to the dictionary of death. It's "teenicide."

"Teenicide" was coined by a casualty company for the purpose of designating: 1. Death caused by automobile driver under 20 years of age, usually the result of recklessness or immature judgment; 2. A teen-ager who kills someone or is killed himself in an automobile accident; 3. A general term in recognition of the fact that drivers under 20 are involved in a disproportionately high number of highway fatalities in the United States.

According to reliable figures, out of 32,500 traffic deaths in the United States in 1947, teenicides were responsible for nearly 25 per cent—and this does not include the mature drivers and pedestrians killed by this group. When a teenicide gets behind the wheel of a car, he is twice as dangerous as the mature adult. Drivers in the 16-20 age group are involved in five times as many accidents as the 45-60 group. Sixteen-year-olds alone are involved in nine times as many accidents as the 45-60 group!

We are now face to face with one of the grimmest facts of our existence today: the teen-ager is a dangerous person at the wheel of an automobile. And the kind of crashes they have are worse. Policemen, ambulance drivers and attendants know that. And yes, the undertakers know it, too. Let's face it, teen-agers. Let's face it, parents. Teenicide must be stamped out!

This problem must be approached in three ways, according to James S. Kemper, chairman of the National Traffic Safety Council. First, teen-agers must have sound educational programs, preferably in schools, to teach better driving. Second, stricter police enforcement of traffic rules and stricter requirements for licenses. (Four states require no license at any age, eight states allow boys and girls of 15 to drive and the legal age is 16 in most states.) Third, and most important, parents themselves should not only teach the technical points of good driving, but should set an example themselves.

Now with the left hand, take the sleeve that is facing away from you at the elbow and gently pull it toward you until it folds against the other sleeve. As you let go of the sleeve, slide the coat over the outside of your left arm (with your right hand still holding the neck). Slide it so one side fits into the crook of your elbow and the other just covers your wrist.

You can let your right hand drop the neck of the coat now. Take a good look of what has happened. The neck of the coat, so often gaping unattractively in full view, is next to your body and out of sight. The skirt, the best-looking part of any folded garment, ripples at your side. The sleeves that usually stand out like two limp scarrows are hidden.

Secrets of Charm How to Carry That Coat

By John Robert Powers

CARRY YOUR TOPCOAT AS THE POWERS GIRLS DO! IT IS SURE TO ADD TO YOUR APPEARANCE.

NOW that top coat weather is near, knowing how to carry a top coat so that it looks like a handsome accessory instead of a fugitive from some collection of old carpet bags is a pretty pertinent point of charm!

You can take it from me that no Powers Girl ever grabs up a coat and slings it carelessly under her arm! She's learned in the big fashion shows just how to carry one so that it never detracts from her costume, her coat or herself.

Picking up a coat in the center of the back of the neck with her thumb and forefinger, a Powers model holds it just high enough to clear the ground. Try this and see how the bulkiest coat falls into natural, soft folds!

Now with the left hand, take the sleeve that is facing away from you at the elbow and gently pull it toward you until it folds against the other sleeve. As you let go of the sleeve, slide the coat over the outside of your left arm (with your right hand still holding the neck). Slide it so one side fits into the crook of your elbow and the other just covers your wrist.

Economical Menus for Tomorrow

By Meta Given

IN your opinion, what constitutes a good recipe? Do you think it is one you can tamper with and it will still help you to produce good food? Unless you are one of the few skilful experts, it would be only an accident if a good recipe could be altered purposely and you could obtain good food.

Barbecued Spareribs.

Three pounds spareribs, one and one-half teaspoons salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, one-fourth teaspoon chili powder, one-fourth teaspoon poultry seasoning, one small onion, one can (8 oz.) tomato sauce, two cups (2 cups) water, one teaspoon sugar.

Trim any excess fat from ribs. Place in a shallow baking pan so that ribs are in a single layer, if possible. For easier handling, measure seasonings and spices and mix together. Sprinkle uniformly over ribs on both sides. Slice onion over top and pour tomato sauce over all. Add water and sprinkle sugar over sauce. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for about one and one-half hours or until very tender—baste often and turn ribs several times during cooking. The cooking time depends on the age of the animal when slaughtered. Add more water if necessary, but sauce should be thick enough to cling to meat when done. Four servings.

Barbecued Hamburgers.

One pound ground bottom round steak, one teaspoon salt, one cup soft bread crumbs, one-half cup milk, one medium onion (size egg) finely chopped, one-half cup shortening, one-sixteenth teaspoon pepper, three tablespoons Worcestershire sauce, two tablespoons cider vinegar, one-fourth cup sugar, one cup chili sauce.

Combine first five ingredients, mixing well. Shape into eight patties. Heat shortening in skillet. Add patties and brown on both sides. Blend rest of ingredients, pour half over hamburgers. Cover and cook slowly about 30 minutes. Baste hamburgers with sauce in last 10 minutes. Four servings. The last 10 minutes of cooking. Four servings.

Low-Cost Menus.

TUESDAY.

BREAKFAST: Fresh sliced peaches or ready-to-eat cereal with sugar and half-and-half, bran muffins, orange marmalade.

LUNCHEON: Creamed chipped beef and hard-cooked eggs on toast, sliced cucumbers and tomato salad, sugar cookies.

DINNER: Barbecued spareribs, baked potatoes, buttered carrots, lettuce with whipped cream blue cheese dressing, bread and butter, red raspberry sundaes.

My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Do you have a problem? If so, write to Martha Carr. Inclose an addressed, stamped envelope if you want a personal reply.

Dear Martha Carr:

I AM a girl age 20. For the past year I have been earning my own living. The man I have been going with is 24 and works on the floor below me for the same company. The first time we dated all my friends said he was not the kind of fellow for me, claimed he is a drunkard. I did not listen for he was fun to be with, so kept on dating him and fell in love with him. Never has he got drunk when out with me. He knows I wouldn't stand for it, but I do know he likes his liquor. Friends tell me to marry him will mean poverty, sorrow and hardships, but I love him so much I could put up even with all that just to be with him. But common sense tells me I have no right to pick a drunken father for my children. Do you think he will stop this dreadful habit if he realizes he has to choose between me and liquor? I realize that staying off the stuff for good and all after we married would be very different from just laying off a day or an evening at a time when we are together, as he does now. I love this man so much I know I'll never marry anyone else. I can't stop seeing him for we run into each other at work, at noon time, and everywhere. Do you think I should marry him.

ACHING HEART.

Do not labor under the delusion that this man is going to reform when he marries you. If he does he is one in a million. However much he may love you his love of drink may prove even stronger. The thing to do is to get him to reform before you agree to marry him, and after he has proved that he can do without liquor over a reasonable length of time then you might take the chance. If he really wants to overcome this habit he can get help from Alcoholics Anonymous which you will find listed in the telephone book, and also from the Psychiatric Clinic, 507 South Euclid avenue. In either case he will have to co-operate with the treatment or suggestions offered. You are very young indeed to think of marrying any man with a habit so strongly formed. The world has countless men who are not addicted to drink and surely it would be wiser for you to break with this one and find a man to marry who is not afflicted with this habit. As you say, when you think of marriage you have more than just yourself to consider.

IN ANSWER TO "G. W.": If your mother has decided you and the boy are getting too serious it is natural for her not to want you to see each other. Do as she tells you to, go out with others, try to remember that at 16 you are far too young to be thinking seriously of anyone. If you and the boy truly love each other you will care just as much in another few years, and by then you will be more of an age to be thinking in terms of marriage.

IN ANSWER TO "Bob": If you will telephone the Social Service Department of any of the hospitals to which you would like to send the magazines, they will be able to tell you whether or not they can send them, or you will have to bring them in yourself.

IN ANSWER TO "Jo-Ann": If you will send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope I'll mail you my "Picnic Games" and "Pen & Pencil Games" leaflets. I also have directions for a scavenger hunt if you would like to have it, too.

IN ANSWER TO "Uncertain": How about giving a party and asking this boy with the rest of the crowd? I'll mail you my "General Party Games," "Picnic Games" and "Scavenger Hunt" which should give you some excellent ideas.

IN ANSWER TO "Bewildered": To clean the copper mugs make a paste of equal quantities of flour and salt moistened with vinegar. If the spots are stubborn let the paste dry on the article. Wash off with soap and water.

IN ANSWER TO "A. H.": Have you spoken to your parish priest? He is in the best position to know about activities of the kind you have in mind.

IN ANSWER TO "Kathy": If you will send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope I'll mail you my "Names for Boys and Girls" and also my "Favorite Prayers for Children."

Confide in Teacher

By Angelo Patri

WHEN you enter a child in a new school, either as a beginner or a pupil in an upper grade, make a point of telling the teacher about any deficiency, or any special physical need that must be met in the classroom management. Tell her that the child is hard of hearing so that she can place him to the best advantage in the classroom. If his vision is deficient and he must wear glasses, but hates them and tries to do without them, tell the teacher. If he must leave the room between sessions or classes, explain the situation to the teacher.

Some people think that telling the teacher about such matters will set her against the child, make her think he is unfit, maybe a nuisance. In all the years I have dealt with teachers, I have never found that to be true. But I have found children suffering failure and defeat because they had defects the teacher knew nothing about.

THE TEACHER is the pupil's friend. If he is not, he cannot teach him. Parents need to believe that, because it establishes the right relationship between teacher and pupil, between home and school. The professional teacher, and there should be no other kind, never tells family secrets. She guards them with the same care and silence that the physician exercises in relation to his patients, so parents need not fear trusting them with the harmless secrets of defective hearing, vision, nerves and the like.

When the teacher knows that the child needs special care and help, she sets the stage for it in the day's program. The hard of hearing child is placed close to her and she makes certain he hears what she says. A helpful child is assigned to be this handicapped one's helper and friend.

THE CHILD whose eyes are weak is placed where he can see and has a friend assigned to help him. If the defect is very serious, there is a special teacher who coaches him in the class work for certain periods a day, after which he works with his classmates.

Children work best when they belong to a group, so that we do not isolate them completely from the other children, unless it is quite out of the question to keep them in the group. The hard of hearing child must learn to live among hearing people, so he's kept with hearing children as much as possible. The same practice applies to the other handicapped ones.

Be sure to tell the teacher about any difficulty the child has to overcome, so that he can be helped. The teacher can't help when she doesn't know.

Outstanding Grower of Hybrid Corn

Illinois Man, Who Started as Farm Hand at 14, Meets Payroll Averaging $400,000 a Year

By F. A. Behymer

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

EL PASO, Ill., Sept. 12. WHEN in fullness of time, the final reckoning is made and honors are awarded for service rendered, it will be spoken of as the life of Lester Pfister, a man of his deserving, that when there was fear of a corn famine in the land he made two grains to grow where one had grown before and thereby earned the blessing that belongs to one who proves himself a benefactor to his generation and to generations yet unborn.

Lester Pfister is one of the men, who, more than 25 years ago, faced the fact of diminishing corn production due to loss of soil fertility and did something about it. What they set out to do was to improve upon nature's haphazard way of fertilizing seed which worked very well in virgin soil but failed with the gradual impairment of the soil.

Hybridization, the crossing of selected strains, was known to be the answer—if it could be accomplished. It would take years of patient research and thousands of experimental cross-pollinations. There were men who had faith that the thing could be done and willingness to spend themselves in doing it. One of them was Henry Wallace. Another was Lester Pfister. What Henry Wallace accomplished gave greater glory to him and to Iowa. What Lester Pfister wrought brought honor to him and to Illinois.

This is the story of Lester Pfister, the Illinois farm boy who made two grains of corn grow where only one had grown before and gained such fame as is reserved for those who serve their fellow men. Along the way he made a fortune, but that is beside the point, for it is Lester Pfister's favorite saying that life is too short to spend time making money.

Lester, born four miles southeast of here, was 8 years old when his father died in 1905. There were four other children between the ages of six months and 11 years. After the inevitable farm sale and the payment of debts his mother had $3000, on the interest from which the family lived.

When Lester was 14 he went to work as a farm hand for a neighbor, Arch Haas, for $30 a month, boarding at home. When he was 18 he and his brother, Lloyd, 21 years old, took over one of his grandfather's farms, 120 acres, raising corn and feeding it to their hogs. When he married Helen Vogel in 1924, he rented the same farm and operated it for three years and then, mortgaging everything that he owned, bought it in 1930 for $225,000.

After the depression years, when the value had shrunk to $125 an acre, he had begun experimenting with inbred pollination which was later to develop into cross-fertilization. His only explanation is that he was always inquisitive and, seeing that better and more corn was needed, wanted to see what he could do to increase the quantity and improve the quality.

It was on July 21, 1925, a well-remembered date, that he began his experimentation with the knowledge that it would be six years at least, before he could expect returns, if any, from his investments of time and toil and devotion.

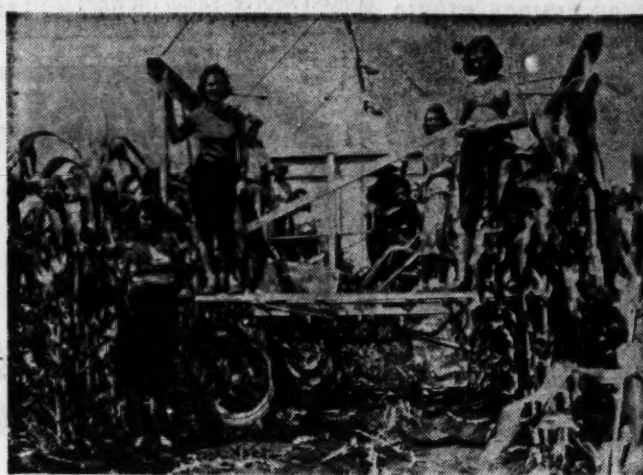

At first it was inbreeding, which meant developing selected lines from the same plants, which tended to eliminate the weaknesses. As a result of the experimentation of Pfister and others there are now 20 inbred lines in the country.

The next step was the creation of hybrids by cross-breeding the inbreds year after year, gaining vigor along with the elimination of weaknesses.

The procedure is to plant two rows of one inbred strain and alongside these plant four rows of another inbred. At the right time the four rows are detasseled, permitting the silks of those rows to be pollinated from the tassels of the two rows. This results in cross-bred kernels of quality and quantity as determined by the abundance, an increased yield of 15 to 25 per cent, soundness, size and uniformity of the ears at maturity.

The chief merit of hybrid corn is that, because of its vigor, it will go through the droughts that are the farmers' greatest dread, and stand up in the windstorms that level the taller and less resistant stalks that are grown from open pollination. So that, in a year, the stalks grown from hybrid seed will produce twice to four times as much corn as can be gathered from open-pollinated fields.

Farmers, accustomed to getting their seed free by saving the best ears of this year's crop for next spring's planting, had to be shown that hybrid seed would do what

HIGH SCHOOL AND COLLEGE STUDENTS EARN MONEY IN THE SUMMER TIME DETASSLING CORN. THEY RIDE DOWN THE ROWS ON THE MECHANICAL RIG SHOWN HERE.

Pfister claimed it would. They were shown through the years by being permitted to share in the experimentation with seed supplied by him and with careful noting of results. When the farmers were convinced of the virtue of the seed, there was another hitch. They were frankly told that they could not pick hybrid seed from their own fields for next year's replanting without losing all that had been gained in quantity and quality, for in that case there would be a throw-back to one of the other of the parents and the planter would be right back where he started. What it meant was that farmers had to buy commercial hybrid seed for each year's planting. It sounded to them like a city slicker trying to put something over on them. They were sold on it, however, when they saw the results.

NOW that they have been shown, the farmers are fully sold on hybrid seed. Nearly all of them buy from Pfister, the greatest individual grower in the country, or some other hybrid producer and do not grumble about feeding to the hogs the best ears that were formerly saved for seed. Selling the seed is the easiest part of it. Pfister's real problem is producing it in the right quantity and quality. In the face of strong competition he has to keep the costs down. This he does by inventing and manufacturing in his own shops heavy mechanical equipment for replacing wherever possible hand labor in the various processes—planting, detassling, harvesting, sorting, drying, shelling, grading, storage and delivery—on the six farms, 1080 acres, of his own, and the 59 farms, 4800 acres, which are operated under contracts with the owners.

The essential equipment includes five huge four-row pickers, invented and built by him, each of which picks as much in 20 minutes as a man could pick in a day; 40 detassling machines, each carrying 12 persons who, working 12 rows at a time, can do three times as much work as they could if they walked between the rows.

Raising and processing hybrid seed is definitely big business, as carried on in the seven processing and storage buildings which cost more than $800,000. Of the 107 year-round employees, 70 have been with the company for 8 to 10 years and some for 16 years, and as they have helped build the business they have the assurance that they can keep working as long as they want to. Pfister's own land, on the basis of present valuation, is worth $350,000. His processing plant, in operation, is worth $600,000, but if it ever closes down it will not be worth more than 10 cents in the dollar because of the increased production he would not be good for anything else. The payroll averages $400,000 a year. For the detassling season of about four weeks Pfister employs hundreds of high school boys and girls and college students home for vacation. One year the number was 1100. At harvest time about 250 men and women are employed, mostly at sorting.

It is a question whether Lester Pfister, at his attained age of 52 (5 feet 9, 120 pounds), is greatest as a grower of hybrid corn or as an inventor and master mechanic. It is a case of how happy he could be with one if the other were away. He gets along pretty well with both, making them serve each other. He is true to the soil which first claimed him but not less true to the machinery that enchants him, caring the more for it because it serves him in getting the best out of the soil. It is for that purpose that he invents and builds. He might make another fortune in the manufacture and sale of machinery, but he is not in that business. Sometimes he takes out patents on his inventions and sometimes he doesn't, for he looks upon patents as a bother, good for nothing except to invite lawsuits. He had a patent on his big pickers, but when the war came along and there was need of increased production he released it, so that anybody who wanted to could build one. He did the same thing with his patents on graders.

Lester Pfister's idea of a good time is to get into old clothes and a cap with the visor pulled to one side and go into a huddle with his three tall sons, Jerry, Walter and Danny, over a new wrinkle he has thought of to make his big pickers more efficient. This writer, coming to the prosperous corn belt town of El Paso the night before Labor day, figured erroneously that Monday being a holiday, Pfister would be sleeping late and timed his morning call accordingly. At the Pfister home four miles out in the country, the word was that he would be found at the plant in town. There he was found, hard at work as he had been since 4:45 a.m., daylight saving time. Now, at 8:30, it was time for breakfast, so he led the way to a nearby restaurant and over his bacon and eggs talked about hybrid corn.

Modern Marriage

Breaking the Triangle

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

IT'S the "other woman" again. Mrs. L. had the proof for some time, Mrs. L. declares. "She's a woman of no character whatever—three times divorced. She acts as waitress in a drinking establishment when she isn't being supported by some man."

"Normally my husband is discriminating in his friendships, fastidious in his personal habits, proud of his standing in the community. That makes this episode all the more mysterious. So far I have tried to go on as if nothing had happened. I haven't let them know I suspect anything is wrong. But I don't know how long I can continue to live a lie like that."

ONE OF HIS FRIENDS knows about it and has tried to make him see reason, but apparently my husband has gone beyond the point of seeing reason. What do you think it is, Dr. Popenoe, that makes him find this female so irresistible? Is she giving him dope, or something of that sort?"

No, Mrs. L., I think it's safe to guess that she isn't giving him dope. You might describe the situation by saying that she herself is dope. An infatuation of this kind is a good deal like a drug addiction. Why is it that the "dope fiend" finds it so hard to go without his drug and will go to any extreme to get it? Not so much because of the pleasure when he has the narcotic, as because of the pain when he doesn't have it. It is, in other words, not so much the satisfaction from the drug itself as the fear of the withdrawal symptoms, that keeps the habit riveted on him.

SIMILARLY your husband holds on to this woman not so much because of the satisfaction he gets from her, as because of the misery he would face if he gave her up. What kind of misery? That of his own conscience, his own self-respect, his own ideals which he would then have to face.

He has persuaded himself, somehow, that she is a superior person. (I'm describing the general features of an infatuation, because of course I know nothing in detail about your husband's case.) If, by giving her up and admitting he was mistaken, he now had to face the facts, had to admit to himself what a fool he had made of himself (that's what "infatuation" means, literally) it would be too painful.

For this reason, it doesn't pay to argue with or denounce a man who has such an infatuation. Your job is to make yourself and the home more attractive, and to let the other woman prove to him; gradually, what a worthless creature she is. She can do that for herself, but you can't do it for her, in such a case.

You have certainly failed somewhere on your own job, however. Go to work on that.

Q. Do you think it is possible for a person to love more than once?

A. Certainly—unless you are emotionally defective in some way. Inability to love more than once would indicate that there is something the matter with you!

Contract Bridge

By Ely Culbertson

AMONG the many fallacious ideas still current is the so-called rule of "third-hand-high."

The way experts fracture this "rule" whenever the occasion suggests it, is well demonstrated in the following deal.

South, dealer
Neither side vulnerable
A104

THE bidding:
South West North East
2N.T. Pass 3N.T. Pass
Pass Pass
West opened the spade three, dummy's four was put in—and East, after only a moment's thought, played the spade eight. By holding out the king, East was guilty of the "crime" of "finessing against his own partner"—but he was also (incidentally) defeating the contract!

South won the first trick with the spade queen and cashed his top clubs, hoping to break that suit. West, however, took both the third and the fourth round of clubs (while East discarded two hearts, and declared a spade); then West led another spade. Dummy's ace won, and South now took a finesse to the diamond queen. It held, but when he followed up with the ace and another diamond, he ran up against East's holding in that suit, and it was all over—there was no further hope for three no-trump.

Far from really being a "crime," East's refusal to put up the spade king on his partner's opening lead was 100 per cent correct. Observe what would have happened if East had played the king. South, an expert, undoubtedly would have unblocked his own queen so as to leave himself with two entries to dummy (via a later finesse against the spade jack). With those two entries, it would be elementary for South to take two finesesses in diamonds, and nothing could stop him from collecting two spade tricks, two hearts, three diamonds and two clubs, for the neat total of nine tricks.
